PREFACE.

HIS Volume covers the period from January, 1776, to October 30th, 1845, closing with an account of the visit of the late Queen Victoria and the Prince Consort to Lincoln's Inn on the occasion of the opening of the New Hall.

The materials are, as before, the Black Books of the Society, the Red Books and Serle's Court, otherwise New Square, books, which contain orders relating to chambers. A book, containing Resolutions passed by the Bar Messes or the Gentlemen of the Bar, has disappeared. Reference is made to it at pp. 110, 111, of the text.

The table of Contents may be usefully referred to, and attention is particularly called to the paper on the site of Lincoln's Inn by Mr. Paley Baildon, F.S.A. This is of great historical interest to Fellows of the Society; it brings together all the authorities on the history of the site of Lincoln's Inn, and, as every volume in this series, is an example of Mr. Baildon's thorough style of work.

ADMISSION AND CALL.

This volume, like the last, shows attempts by the several Inns of Court to pass a common Code, regulating Admissions and Calls. From time to time one Inn obtained the opinion of another Inn on a statement of facts, or a Joint Committee composed of representatives from each Inn was appointed to prepare regulations, which, if subsequently adopted by each Inn, would have become a common rule of action. The Black Books state only the action of Lincoln's Inn, and not the final decision of other Inns. It is apparent that many suggested alterations failed to meet with the necessary approval. Fortunately for the Chronicler, the Sixth Report of the Commissioners on Courts of Common Law (on the Admissions of Law Students and Call to the Bar) 1834 contains the Regulations common to all the Inns and a condemnation of the unique and unparalleled control exercised by the Bar of Lincoln's Inn over the performance of exercises as a condition precedent to Call to the Bar. A statement by Mr. Lane, the then Steward of Lincoln's Inn, of the practice of the Society appears in the appendix to the Report.

VOL. IV.

It is thus possible to set out the Regulations affecting Admissions and Calls at this Inn in force in 1834, but a reference to the Index will show that attempts to amend them were still in progress at the close of this volume.

By this date one class of persons was disqualified for admission, viz., p. 174 any person whose name stood on the Roll of Attorneys or Solicitors or who was articled to an Attorney or Solicitor; as will be seen below there were several other classes of persons who, though not disqualified for admission, were shut out from Call to the Bar.

An applicant for admission to the Society, except for the purpose only of holding Chambers, had to present a paper signed by himself, stating his desire to be admitted for the purpose of being called to the Bar and undertaking not to apply for a certificate in pursuance of 44 Geo. III, c. 98, without the leave of the Bench,* and, secondly, a certificate by two Barristers that the applicant was personally known to them as a gentleman of character and respectability and fit to be admitted a member of the Society and called to the Bar.

Unless inquiry shewed that the applicant was not a fit person in the opinion of a Council of the Bench, admission followed on execution of an Admission Bond for payment of commons and dues and (unless the applicant were a member of one of the Universities of Oxford, Cambridge, or Dublin) a deposit of £100 (repaid on call, resignation, or death), and payment of the admission money. The Student, before he could be called to the Bar, was required (1) to have attained the age of 21 years: (2) to have had his name on the books of the Society for five years: this term was reduced to three years, if the applicant held the degree of Master of Arts or Bachelor of Laws at one of pp. 59, the Universities of Oxford, Cambridge, or Dublin, unless his degree had been procured by mandamus: (3) he must have kept twelve Terms commons in the Hall of the Society: and (4) he must have performed nine exercises before the Bar, only three of which could be performed in one Term: (5) the applicant had at a stage, which is now not ascertainable, to perform an exercise before the Bench.

The nature of the exercises and the mode of performance will be dealt with further on, in order to preserve the continuity of the narrative. It is sufficient here to state that the Bar had the right to refuse to allow an applicant to perform exercises and thus to prevent his being called to the bar if (1) he had been in the situation of a Clerk to a Barrister, Conveyancer, Special Pleader or Chancery Draftsman, and had done the offices and received the perquisites of such Clerk, or (2) was in trade, or (3) had written pp. 111, for hire in the newspapers. This last proviso was in force for three years 117 before being rescinded by the Bench.

There were two classes of persons qualified to perform exercises whom the Bench had resolved not to call to the Bar: (1) persons in Priest's or Deacon's Orders, and (2) persons who had taken the benefit of an Insolvent Debtors Act.

Previously to call the applicant's name was placed on the screen in the Hall, in the Benchers' Room and the Steward's Office. His application was communicated to the other Inns.

A Special Council of the Bench was summoned to take into consideration petitions for Call to the Bar. The applicant was proposed for Call at this Council by a Bencher: a second Council was summoned for the purpose of calling applicants to the Bar: at this Council, if no objection were made, his Call took place; he took the oaths of allegiance and supremacy, or made a declaration in lieu of them, in the Hall on the following day, and was then published a Barrister. If objection were made to his Call, a Special Council of the Bench was summoned to decide on the objection: and if the Bench decided against him he had an appeal to the Judges of the Bench, the Exchequer and the Common Pleas.

The next step was the Publication of the Call. There is no exactly contemporaneous record of the procedure, but from the terms of an order in 1856 (after the close of this volume) it seems that the applicant signed in a book kept by the Society for the purpose: and thereupon the Treasurer with a quorum of five Benchers went into the Hall before dinner and standing behind the Bar Table published the call. Probably this was done by the Treasurer calling up the applicant, and adding (as now in 1902) "By the authority and on behalf of the Masters of the Bench I publish you a Barrister of this Society." The Treasurer shook hands with the applicant and the ceremony ended.

It is now convenient to explain the undertaking of the applicant on admission not to apply for a certificate under 44 Geo. III, c. 98, without the leave of the Bench. The 14th Section of that Act imposed a penalty on unauthorised persons drawing conveyances: this clause was improved by the 48 Geo. III, c. 149. Schedule, part 1, Title, "Certificate," which enabled any member of an Inn of Court to take out a Certificate as a Conveyancer, pp. 139-"however ignorant of the Law and unqualified as a Draftsman." The result 140 was stated by Mr. Anderton in a petition to the House of Commons to be, p. 144 that "linendrapers, shopkeepers, auctioneers and inferior tradesmen without any legal education whatever, had got themselves admitted members of the Inns of Court, and were practising as Certificated Conveyancers to the detriment of attornies and solicitors." The Inns of Court agreed together not p. 174 to grant the necessary certificate, until the applicant had kept enough Terms to qualify him for the Bar. Lincoln's Inn issued a list of qualified persons to the Commissioners of Stamps, who undertook to grant certificates only to those persons whose names appeared in such list.

The peculiar control exercised by the Bar of Lincoln's Inn over the performance of exercises and condemned by the Commissioners is well illustrated in the minutes.

We find in 1808 a statement signed by eight Barristers in the p. 110 name of the Bar of Lincoln's Inn to the effect that they had refused to allow a certain person to perform exercises with a view to be called to the Bar. These eight Barristers no doubt represent the only two Bar messes p. 50 which had up to that time been appointed places in Hall. They had a special place, sitting, one at each upper end of the long tables, and were the legitimate descendants of the "Auncyent Barristers" Mess, which sat at the Reader's place.*

These eight Barristers set out the Rules which the Bar had passed and entered "in the Books of the Society,† as to allowing persons particularly circumstanced to perform exercises in order to be admitted to the Bar." The first Rule cited by the Bar mess is dated 1793, and there is nothing to show whether the right to make such a Rule dated from the early days of the Society, or was a usurpation of later years. It seems to have been accepted by the Bench without demur in 1808. An appeal lay from the decision of the Bar Mess to the Bench, and it is remarkable that no appeals have been previously recorded, only three appeals are recorded from the decision of the Bar Mess, and all three in this volume.

p. 110 The first appeal was that of a gentleman, otherwise unobjectionable, p. 118 who had been clerk to a Conveyancer. The Bench decide in his favour, possibly on the ground that the rule on which the Bar decision was based had not been passed until after the appellant had been admitted and kept his terms.

pp. 119, The second appeal, in 1810, is that of a gentleman who had been appointed an Inspector General under a statute relating to assessed taxes, an appointment which "the Gentlemen of the Bar Table were of opinion was incompatible with the practice of a Barrister." The Bench on appeal were of opinion that the objection taken was not sufficient, and therefore recommended it to the Gentlemen of the Bar to hear his exercise.

The third appeal, in 1812, was that of the Editor of the Satirist, a paper which, it was said, contained libellous and unjustifiable attacks upon private p. 128 character inserted with a view to profit. The Bench after hearing reasons for the refusal of the Bar, ordered the gentleman to be called in to perform his exercise, and he was called to the Bar at that Council.

Exercises at the Bar Table were discontinued by order of the Bench, with the consent of the Bar, in 1856.

There was no fixed age qualification for admission. Master William Floyer, junior, aged five years, was admitted a Fellow on June 3, 1808, and p. 113 on the 17th of the same month was admitted on the surrender of his father,* the Rev. William Floyer, to his father's chambers. Two of Mr. Spencer Percival's sons aged 16 and 18 years respectively were admitted Fellows p. 127 in 1812.

One call to the Bar may be specially noted; that in 1833 of Francis Henry Goldsmid a Fellow, "of the Jewish persuasion." He was the first of his nation to be admitted to the English Bar.

EXERCISES AND EDUCATION.

Exercises by the end of the 18th century and probably earlier had lost all educational value. They were of two kinds, the one performed before the Bar at intervals before Call, and the other before the Bench immediately preceding Call. A search for evidence on the nature of the exercises before the Bar has not been successful: but the following account is stated by a present Master of the Bench to have been the procedure in the Exercise before the Bench in 1846. It may reasonably be supposed that the procedure before the Bar was of an equally perfunctory character.

The applicants went before the Bench in pairs: each was provided with a card on which was printed a proposition of Law and an argument. one card, it might be, bore the words "I hold that A shall have the widow's estate," with an argument following. The other card bore "I hold that A shall not have the widow's estate," also with an argument following. The Bencher presiding called on one applicant to begin, who after he had read a few words was stopped by the Bencher. Then the other applicant was called on and also stopped.† The next step was that of Call.

^{*} This gentleman is described as Esquire on admission. It must have been an Exercise of this nature that the Editor of the Satirist performed after the Benchers had allowed his appeal from the decision of the Bar. See another account in Bagehote's Essay on Legal Education.

Thus the agencies for teaching, Readings and Exercises, in force when these records open, ceased to exist in any practical form. Readings ceased after 1680 and the numerous orders of the Bench between 1660 and 1775 show the desire of the Bench to maintain Exercises and the disinclination of the Vol. iii, Bar and Students to perform them. The complaint of the Benchers in 1661 that they were unwilling to believe that there was a consent and combination entertained by some members of the Bar to abet and justify defaults in making Exercises shows, that the institution had ceased to be valued, and was slowly tending to the form which it had assumed before 1846. doubt the historical sequence is that Exercises, having ceased to be useful, were maintained because they were intimately connected with the proceedings towards Call to the Bar, and formed part of the machinery, then thought so requisite, for bringing all candidates for Call in review before the Bar and Bench. It is the fashion to condemn the Rulers of the past for the decay both of Readings and Exercises: but the evidence is clear that both these institutions perished, because in the opinion of the day the purpose for which they had been devised was better met in another fashion. It is certain that the Bench did their best to keep them alive against the hostility o both Bar and Students. Then, as now, a considerable number of Students looked forward to earning their living at the Bar, and neither institution would have died from a general indisposition to take advantage of it, if it had been of any practical use.

It is difficult to judge what was the death blow to Readings and Exercises. Probably the publication of law books and the revelation of secrets of the Law, which it was the first instinct of the lawyer* to keep from the vulgar herd, was the first blow; and the second blow was perhaps the development of the pupil system, which must have existed in some shape from very early times.

It occurred, however, in 1796 to Mr. Michael Nolan to propose to the Bench a series of Lectures on Municipal Law and Law and Equity, an offer which the Bench accepted. In 1799 Mr. James (afterwards Sir James) Mackintosh proposes lectures "on the basis of the positive Law of all states, the Law of Nature and Nations." This offer also was accepted. In 1810 Mr. Joseph Chitty asked permission to deliver a course of Lectures on the Commercial Law in the Hall of the Society. Permission was also granted to Mr. Chitty. No other lectures appear to have been delivered between the last date and 1845 when Lord Brougham proposed that a Lecturer should be appointed for reading annually a course of Lectures in Jurisprudence and the Institutes of the Civil Law and the foundation of Exhibitions for the two students who should on examination shew the greatest proficiency. The consideration of this motion was adjourned, and the result does not appear in this volume.

MASTERS OF THE BENCH.

Between the years 1776 and 1796 twenty-seven Fellows were invited to the Bench and accepted the invitation; nineteen more were invited and refused. From 1797 to 1845 there were but five refusals to eighty-nine The reason for the refusals is not stated, nor is it apparent. Two Fellows, not included in these figures, Lloyd Kenyon, Attorney General, and R. Pepper Arden, Solicitor General, on being invited, declined with regret on account of the rules of the Society of the Middle Temple to which Down to the year 1795 King's Counsel, the holders of they belonged. Patents of Precedence, and stuff gownsmen were elected indifferently, coming up for invitation, apparently by seniority in the Society. But in 1795 "Vicary Gibbs, Esquire, a Barrister of the Society, having been appointed one of H.M. Counsel Learned in the Law," is invited to the Bench, and from that time to 1845, the invitation runs "on his being appointed one of H.M. Counsel Learned in the Law." After the invitation to Vicary Gibbs, eight stuff gownsmen only were elected with the exception of others, who, though stuff gownsmen, had extrinsic merits, such as Mr. Pitt, Chancellor of the Exchequer; Mr. Speaker Addington; Ryder, Home Secretary; Vansittart, Chancellor of the Exchequer; Bathurst, Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster; Jeremy Bentham; Brougham, and Denman, "having been appointed Attorney General and Solicitor General to the Queen respectively"; Tindal, Solicitor General; Canning, Chancellor of the Exchequer, and Sir Edward Ryan, late Chief Justice of Bengal, and an Adviser to the Judicial Committee.

The practice of inviting King's Counsel to the Bench on their appointment gave much annoyance to some of Fellows of the Society. A pp. 137 Mr. Joddrell, against whom judgment had been recovered for arrear of dues which he as a matter of protest had declined to pay,* complained that he felt himself injured and superseded, with many other Seniors of the Society, by the call of Juniors to the Bench, which he considered a violation of their constitutional rights.

In 1793 a practice for the first time appears of the four Fellows last invited to the Bench giving a "Treat" to their Seniors in the form of a dinner. Seven years later, every new Bencher, in lieu of providing a p. 173 dinner, paid ten guineas to the Library Fund, a payment increased to twenty guineas in 1827. This payment is still made by every Bencher on invitation.

p. 57 The Treasurer continued to commute his Treat for six guineas, and to receive for his chamber, supper, and purse £2 13s. 4d.

Masters in Chancery were declared ineligible for invitation to the Bench in 1779.

Councils on the first and last days of Term were held at 6 p.m. i.e. after dinner in 1776.

p. 191 An odd custom crops up for the first time in 1835. Mr. William Selwyn a Master of the Bench had done the Society good service in superintending the preparation of the Catalogue of the Books of the Society, and a vote of thanks to him for his trouble was proposed. "Whereupon," proceeds the Minute, "it was suggested there was no precedent of a vote of thanks by this Bench to any individual Bencher for services performed; therefore, although the Bench was unanimously of opinion that Mr. Selwyn deserved their best thanks for his very valuable services, they regretted their inability to make any order."*

The order of office throughout this period is that the Treasurer of one year becomes the Master of the Library in the next year. After 1821 the Dean of Chapel or the Keeper of the Black Book, generally, but not invariably, becomes Treasurer in the ensuing year. Many Masters serve but one office, and do not appear again in the List of officers. The officers are recorded in this order: Treasurer, Master of the Library, Dean of Chapel, Keeper of the Black Book, and Master of the Walks.

CHAPEL.

In 1794 the Chapel was again a source of expense to the Society. It had cost in 1620 over £3,000 to build, and was substantially repaired in 1680 p. 73 at a further cost of £1,000: at this date a new roof and other necessary reparations are accountable for over £7,000 in the Treasurer's Rolls.

pp. 141, Mr. Egginton of Birmingham was allowed to enrich the upper part of 150 the East Window with Gothic ornaments in stained glass, "which would add much to the brilliancy and effect of the other parts of the Window." Of these additions made in 1818, some still remain to attract attention.

^{*} The Masters of the Bench were not well acquainted with their own precedents. In 1674 and 1675 the Treasurers were thanked for their care and precedence in the "managery" of the Treasurer's place. But with the exception of these two, there is no instance of a vote of thanks to any Master of the Bench for services rendered to the Society.

p. 32

p. 37

Two years later an organ was placed in the gallery at the west end of the Chapel.*

Evening prayers ceased to be performed in 1777 except on Sundays. A daily morning service at 8 a.m. was begun in 1838.

Promotion fell to most of the Preachers of the Society while they held their office. Dr. Hurd succeeded to the Bishopric of Lichfield and Coventry, Dr. Cyril Jackson to the Deanery of Christchurch, Oxford, Mr. William Jackson his brother to the Bishopric of Oxford: Mr. W. van Mildert, Rector of St. Mary-le-Bow, was created Bishop of Llandaff.† Mr. Charles Lloyd accepted the Regius Professorship of Divinity at Oxford, subsequently becoming Bishop of Oxford. Mr. Reginald Heber rose to be Bishop of Calcutta and Mr. Lonsdale was raised to the Bishopric of Lichfield.

Burials under the chapel or in the grounds of the Society, except of such as had been Masters of the Bench, were discontinued by order after p. 51

LIBRARY.

Mr. John Coxe, Junior, Treasurer in 1775, bequeathed to the Society a considerable number of books, for which room could not be found in the existing Library. In 1785 the ground floor of No. 2, Stone Buildings was fitted up for a Library, and the rooms under given to the Librarian, who was the second Butler. Mr. Coxe's chimney piece, apparently also a bequest to the Society, was adapted for use in the smaller room of the Library. Twenty years later Mr. Walker, the Chaplain, is appointed Librarian, and succeeded in both offices by Mr. Hotham. The Library Committee recommend in 1826 that the situations of Chaplain and Librarian should continue to be exercised by one person, and that the Under Librarian should be chosen "with reference to his fitness, and not of necessity taken from the Butlers of the Society by rotation." An Under Librarian was appointed at a salary of 150 guineas a year.

The Library in 1818 was open from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m. in Term Time p. 148 and from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. in Vacations. In 1826 the hours were altered to from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Each new Bencher since 1827 has paid twenty guineas to the Library Fund in lieu of paying for a treat to his seniors at the Bench.

The removal of the chains on all books of the Society was ordered p. 7 in 1777.

* An organ had been offered in 1700 and 1721 and the offers declined by the Bench. † Subsequently Bishop of Durham.

MSS. reports of Cases in Chancery between 1700 and 1740, taken by Mr. Melmoth, were bequeathed by his son to the Society. A collection of books and notes by Mr. Serjeant Hill, 125 in number, were added to the Library at a cost of 300 guineas. Mr. William Selwyn presented the MSS. reports of Gundry, Judge of the Common Pleas.

THE HALL.

p. 58 The Hall continues to serve many uses of the Society. In 1794 Members of the "Armed Association of Lincoln's Inn," who wished to learn the use of arms were permitted to exercise in the Hall in the forenoons. In the same year Divine Service was performed there while the Chapel was under repair. It formed after term the Court of the Chancellor or the Commissioners of the Great Seal. Lastly, it was in daily use during term as a dining hall.

The hour of dinner fixed in 1777 at 4 p.m. on week days and in 1778 at 4.30 p.m. on Sundays, became in 1829 five o'clock "precisely." The fare in p. 117 the main was as simple as ever: but the habits of the age compelled the p. 211 Bench to add potatoes, butter and cheese, which had hitherto been only obtainable on payment by those requiring them.

p. 112 By custom wine was supplied "from the Bench" to the two Bar Messes, bodies, as has been previously stated, with an official position. The Chaplain
p. 112 apparently was entitled to fill a vacancy in one of these Messes at table and to share in the wine, and an order is made to provide him with wine when the Messes are full. It seems that at this time (1808) the Chaplain had not been assigned a place in the third Mess,* and further that the rest of the Bar, with whom the Chaplain would dine when the two messes were full, were not supplied with wine.

The additional Bar Messes, from time to time appointed, enjoyed the privileges of the first two in the matter of wine; and in 1826 (following the example of the other Inns) each mess of students was allowed one bottle of Port.

The Society outgrew the accommodation of their ancient Hall by steps which are clearly marked in the Black Book. In volume ii, pp. 102 and 195, mention is made of one Bar mess sitting at the "aunscient syde table," which was the Reader's seat; no doubt this was a mess consisting of four barristers. By 1791 two Bar messes had been appointed, each sitting at the upper end of one of the long tables (which lay on the eastern and western sides of the Hall) and in that year "the cross table" which had seating room for eleven "was appointed for the rest of the Bar, that were not in the Bar Messes." A petition of the Junior Bar states that the average of fifteen dinners of the Junior Bar in 1798 had risen in 1819 to an average of about thirty and complains of want of room.

The Hall in 1819 was lengthened by ten feet, and two additional messes were appointed in 1824. All the Bar Messes were at this time seated at the table on the eastern side of the Hall, and the western long table constituted the second Bar Table.

A petition in 1838 begs that the second Bar Table may be exclusively appropriated to the use of Barristers. Another petition in 1842 shows that the Hall was nearly twice filled every day with little comfort to the diners.

The Bench, who since January 1839 had been endeavouring to get fit plans for a New Hall, in July 1842 approve Mr. Philip Hardwick's plan for a Hall of "the style towards the end of the 16th century before the admixture of Italian Architecture." The foundation was laid with some ceremony on April 30th, 1843, and the building opened on October 30th, 1845, by Her late Majesty and the Prince Consort. Both ceremonies are described at length in this Volume, and a water-colour drawing in the Benchers' Room records the scene at the lunch in the New Hall.

The stucco on the outside of the Old Hall was probably applied in 1801 by Francis Bernasconi. An architect in 1839 reports that the framework of the roof of the Old Hall consists in part of ancient moulded beams apparently portions of a more elevated Gothic roof.

The regulation, that being present in Hall when grace is said after dinner is essential to the keeping of a Term, dates from 1798 and the supply of gowns for the diners dates from 1833. A practice of wearing hats in Hall after the Benchers had retired from Hall was much deprecated by the Bench in 1841.

CHRONICLE.

As might be expected the secondary effects of war are visible in the minutes of this period.

Robert Williams in 1778 stated that his father could not get remittances from South Carolina to enable him to pursue his study of the Law in England, and prayed for re-delivery of his bond.

In 1795 two "proper men" had to be provided by Lincoln's Inn as their quota for manning the Navy, and could not be procured, as at first supposed, for £36 the two; with some trouble the Steward succeeded in getting two for £21 each, and two sets of clothes per man.

In the next year the Steward was ordered to procure three men to serve in the Army under 37 Geo. III, c. 4. This was done at the expense of the Society, to prevent the contributory shares falling on the shoulders of gentlemen of the Inn. The Steward found three men at twenty-one guineas apiece, one-third of the bounty being paid to each man on enrolment and the balance to the Treasurer of the County of Middlesex for his use. By February, 1797, two of the men had deserted, while the Steward had found two substitutes, whom he himself delivered at Chatham. The Society recovered from the Receiver-General of the County of Middlesex £7 7s. for each deserter, but the two substitutes cost the Society £67 18s. delivered at Chatham.

Many militia and volunteers, called out on duty in England and Ireland, prayed remission of terms; and five Fellows who had been arrested while passing through France in 1802, prayed like relief. Four of them were released in 1806, but the fifth was detained as a prisoner of war until 1814.

The Society in 1778 contributed £1,000 towards the exigencies of the country. This was a contribution to the Patriotic Loan called for by Mr. Pitt in the autumn of 1797, made under the provisions of the 33 Geo. III, c. 16, for granting to his Majesty an aid and contribution for the prosecution of the war, which authorised the receipt by the Bank of England of voluntary contributions towards the purposes of the Act.

The year 1782 was marked by two fires, one in New Square. The incidents recorded of the latter were probably like those of every fire at that date in London. The scene of action was unlit by any lamps. The fire broke out at night and spreading from one house to another became fierce. There was no sufficient supply of water, and the key of the engine house was not forthcoming when wanted. The appliances for putting out fire, such as ladders, hatchets, saws and crows, were either very scant or non-existent. In course of time assistance came from many quarters. The Officers and Gentlemen of the Association of St. Andrew's, Holborn, the Officers and men of H. M.'s Regiment of Coldstream Guards, apparently from barracks in or near Soho Square, Mr. Brodie and his men, the Bridewell Boys, Mr. Sheriff Taylor, the Lincoln's Inn Engineers, the firemen, turncocks, and porters by their joint efforts succeeded in putting out the fire. Bread and beer were distributed to the Guards and Bridewell Boys. In the confusion carbines were stolen from the Lodge and several persons were caught stealing lead. The Society distributed over fifty guineas among the helpers, including five guineas to the privates of the Guards and three guineas to the porters, excepting Thomas Dinsley on account of his misbehaviour.

Two years before, in 1780, the Gordon Rioters were pervading the neighbourhood of Lincoln's Inn. Members of the Society were deterred from coming to keep the last half of Easter Term, and the Bench allowed them the benefit of the Term on payment of commons for the last half-week. On June 6th Lord Mansfield's house in Bloomsbury Square was burnt down, and a guard of the Northumberland Militia protected Lincoln's Inn from the 7th to the 17th of June at a cost to the Society of £364 12s. od. for provisions. The Guard was taken over by the West Riding York Militia. In answer to the Adjutant-General, the Bench intimate on July 21st, that a Captain's Guard would be sufficient for the security of the Inn, if reinforced on application. Probably by this time the Bench had bought the gunpowder and balls for which the Treasurer paid £7 6s. od. The West York remained on guard up to July 20th. Charges appear for "muggs to replace in the room of them broken by the Militia during the late termoults" knives, forks and trenchers, furniture, small beer and porter, and finally "straw for the militia." The Bench added to the defences of the Inn in 1781 seven blunderbusses with belts and buckles to match.

The Society were of opinion that the Vill of Lincoln's Inn, i.e., the land covered by the Episcopal Palace and grounds, was extra-parochial, and consequently not rateable nor the residents thereon liable to serve in the Militia. The Society later on claimed that Serle's Court was also extra-parochial. The only controversy settled in this period was the liability to the rates of the Parish of St. Andrew, Holborn-above-Bars. This dispute the two parties adjusted by means of a Private Act of Parliament.

The assassination of Spencer Perceval, who had been Treasurer in 1803, and was at the moment the foremost man in the Kingdom, was greatly felt in Lincoln's Inn. The Bench admitted two of his sons without fees to the Fellowship and transferred to them two sets of chambers held by him, as a tribute of regard to the memory of so illustrious an ornament of their profession and Society. A correspondence is recorded between Sir Thomas Plumer for the Society, Lord Arden and Mrs. Perceval, which shows that a Solicitor General may not be capable of writing graceful English. The Bench resolved to put up a tablet with an inscription in the Chapel to the memory of their deceased friend, and carried out their resolution eleven years after it had been passed.

Mr. Daniel O'Connell, gentleman, removes from the Society in 1796, to Gray's Inn. Mr. Benjamin Disraeli in 1831 takes his name from the Books of the Society, his health not permitting him to follow the Law. William Ewart Gladstone, Esq., does the like in 1839, having given up his intention of being called to the Bar. Charles Kingsley, Esq., follows him in 1841, having also given up a like intention.

The Society of Furnival's Inn in 1817 ceased to occupy their Inn. They seem, when they left, to have consisted of six ancients and about sixteen juniors. As the Society allege, County Attorneys and Solicitors, who in time past had made a point of being admitted to the Inns of Chancery had ceased to seek admission, and the revenues of the Society had been thereby seriously diminished. Mr. Henry Peto, of Little Britain, contracted to rebuild the Inn in accordance with the plans approved by the Bench of Lincoln's Inn.

At the end of the last Volume an infant left in the Inn had been taken up by the Society, clothed and boarded. His story continues in the Treasurers' Rolls: frocks and shoes are bought for him in 1776: a mad cat bites him in 1780 and one guinea's worth of powders are bought to cure him. Two years later, a guinea-and-a-half is charged for the cost of taking him by waggon to Piersbridge, on his way to school with Mr. Facer, at Staindrop County Durham. His education and board there for three years cost £7 12s. a year. He is then at the age of sixteen apprenticed to a carpenter of Staindrop for seven years, with an allowance of pocket-money for the next five years from the Bench of 40s. a year.

In 1789 Mr. Richard Pippin, postman in the district of Chancery Lane, gets leave from the Bench to come into the Inn between five and seven o'clock every evening to receive letters from members of the Society.

In 1814 the arms over the Great Gateway were repaired: the wooden waterpipes in the Inn were replaced by iron pipes. Gas was supplied to the twenty lamp posts of the Inn in 1816.

GROUND PLAN OF LINCOLN'S INN AND NEW SQUARE.

The entries towards the close of this volume record what was probably the final stage in the transformation of the Palace of the Bishops of Chichester into the modern Lincoln's Inn. For though new buildings will from time to time be erected, it is likely they will follow more or less the lines of the old buildings which they replace, and that the general plan of the Inn will not be altered materially. The coloured plan shows the dates of the erection of the present buildings, and with the assistance of the maps reproduced in this volume, an idea may be gained of the chief stages of the transformation.

The first trustworthy view is that by Hollar drawn about 1650, a reproduction of which faces p. 302.

In this the extent of the Bishop's Palace and grounds, as they existed in 1422, is discernible, but in the present condition of the ground somewhat difficult to realise.

The boundaries at that time appear to have been marked by ditches with a mound or a wall of mud thatched with reeds. By 1650 the Society had replaced or supplemented these by the walls shown on Hollar's print. The ditches were interrupted by a postern gate adjoining (what is now) No. 13, New Square, and a gate leading into Chancery Lane, on a different site from that of the present Great Gate.

Chancery Lane was then, as now, the eastern boundary. A daub or mud wall is mentioned, as dividing the property from the Lane. On the north a boundary of some sort existed; the wall delineated is stated to have been built 3 feet inside the Society's property, which may well have been the case, if the wall were built on the inner side of the boundary ditch. The western wall was ordered to be built "all the length of the ditch." The ditch, it must be noted, ran an uninterrupted course from the Great Turnstile along the line of the present wall, across the present gateway into Lincoln's Inn Fields and over the site of Nos. 11A and 11, New Square, to a point now marked by a white stone and inscription on the east wall of No. 11, New Square. In other words the bevelled corner shewn on the map rested a little short of the southern end of No. 11, New Square.

Three sides have now been followed, and the rectangle was completed by a wall running eastward from the site of the white stone just mentioned, (inside the present garden of New Square) in the line of the south front of No. 13, New Square, continued by the south front of No. 16, Old Buildings to Chancery Lane. The postern or field gate was just opposite No. 13, New Square, occupying no doubt the position it had in the Bishop's time.

The southern line just described seems to have lain 16 feet inside the real boundary, which was marked at the eastern end in 1537 by a palisado. This interval seems to point to the existence at some time of a moat or ditch along the south side of the Bishop's Palace.

The walled piece of ground shown abutting on the south of No. 13, New Square, did not form part of the Episcopal property, as will be seen hereafter.

The area within the boundaries in 1422 contained buildings, whose exact site cannot be identified. Mention is made of a chapel, a hall, and some dwelling-houses. A garden lay along Chancery Lane, and the rest of the area was known as the Conygarth, Coniger or Backsyde.*

The first stage of the transformation is shown by Hollar's View.† Every building and wall there delineated had been erected by the Society since their occupation. The artist, it may be remarked, has placed the Chapel and the Gate House a little out place, but has succeeded in giving the character of the buildings. A still better representation will be found in the background of one of the Chapel windows on the southern side. The gift of these windows is, strangely enough, not mentioned in the Black Books: the one in question represents the present Chapel standing in Old Square and gives the appearance of the Buildings almost contemporaneous with that in Hollar's view.

The walled enclosure on the south side of No. 13, New Square projecting beyond the line of the buildings was bought in 1585 from William Moresome for a kitchen garden, thus extending the property of the Inn to the point represented by the present north wall of No. 1, New Square. Previous to this purchase, in 1537, a pale had been erected at a distance of 16 feet from the line of the buildings, marking, it may be supposed, the southern boundary of the property in this direction. The View shows the mud wall between the garden and the walks or Coneygarth. The Red House or House of Office is conspicuous in the centre of the walks. At the north-west corner of the walks a gate in the outer wall gave access to and from Lincoln's Inn Fields.

The map issued by Ogilby in 1677† shows the changes made in the gardens and walks under the order of the Bench in 1662. In the northern part or the upper garden a raised terrace ran down the western side ceasing at the end of the upper garden. A flight of steps, marked in the map led to the level of the rest of the upper garden. South of this was the Lower or Benchers' Garden, railed off from the rest of the enclosure: at the lower end of this garden was a gardener's cottage.

The map shows the parish boundaries by dotted lines. The western half of Lincoln's Inn lay in St. Giles-in-the-Fields, the eastern half in the Parish of St. Andrew's, Holborn. The future site of New Square is shown to be, as to the western portion in St. Clement's Danes, and as to the eastern portion in the Liberty of the Rolls. These divisions, since the passing of the London Government Act, 1899, ceased to be material to the Society. Hollar's and Ogilby's Maps are on nearly the same scale, and the latter

^{*} The rent of these two was paid, up to 1549, to the Master of S. Giles' Hospital, London, or to the Master of the Hospital at Burton Lazars, offices held frequently by the same person.

† See reproduction facing p. 302.

shows an advance of Portugal Row eastward to the position it at present occupies.

Roque's map of 1746* shows the effect on Lesser Lincoln's Inn Fields of the agreements between Serle and the Society for the building of Serle's Court, otherwise New Square. Beginning on the West, the raised Terrace in the Upper Garden was with its wall continued through the Benchers' iii, 173, Garden to the site of the North Wall of No. 11, New Square. It was made out of the earth dug out of Fickett's Fields, to make room for the foundations of the buildings of New Square. The Terrace was separated by a "palisado pale" from the rest of the Benchers' Garden; a footway "under iii, 214, an arch," between Nos. 9 and 10, New Square, gave access to Serle 283, 459 Street. The Brick Wall making the partition between the Benchers' Garden and the new Serle's Court (including apparently the postern or iii, 242 Field-gate), was pulled down and replaced by palisado pales. A slice of 54 feet in depth, as is testified by the tablet on the north wall of No. 11, New Square, was taken off the south end of the Benchers' Garden and thrown into the area of Serle's Court.

On the south side a "convenient handsome proportionable gate" was iii, 459 made in the eastern end to go out under an arch into Carey Street. This was the only carriage way in and out of Serle's Court.

A wall was built from the south east corner of the kitchen garden at a distance of 10 feet from Chichester Rents towards Bell Yard and thence to the east end of the southern range of the New Buildings. Two foot gates were opened in this wall opposite to Chichester Rents and Bishops Court respectively, and a five foot passage taken out of the southern end of the p. 172 kitchen garden. A tablet on the north wall of No. 1, New Square records that that wall was built on Lincoln's Inn ground, i.e., on the site of the old south wall of the kitchen garden.

In the space between the back of No. 1, New Square and the new gates were erected a House of Office and a Gardener's house, to replace those removed from the Garden.

New Square was laid down in gravel and ornamented by the munificence of Mr. Cavendish Weedon, with a column supporting a clock, and a fountain in connection with which were four Tritons holding shells, or, as the Black Book of June 14th, 1703, states, "a mairemaid."

The third stage of the transformation is marked by the erection of Stone Buildings and the New Hall. Stone Buildings begun in 1774 and finished in 1843 covered the eastern side of the upper garden, completed the front looking on to Chancery Lane. A carriage way and a footway were opened into Chancery Lane.

On the erection of the New Hall on the western side of the Garden, another slice was taken off the Bencher's Garden to provide a site for a new main gateway into Lincoln's Inn Fields; the foot passage from New Square into Serle Street was taken into the adjoining Chambers and the carriage way under the arch into Carey Street was converted into a footway.

NOTE ON THE FRONTISPIECE.

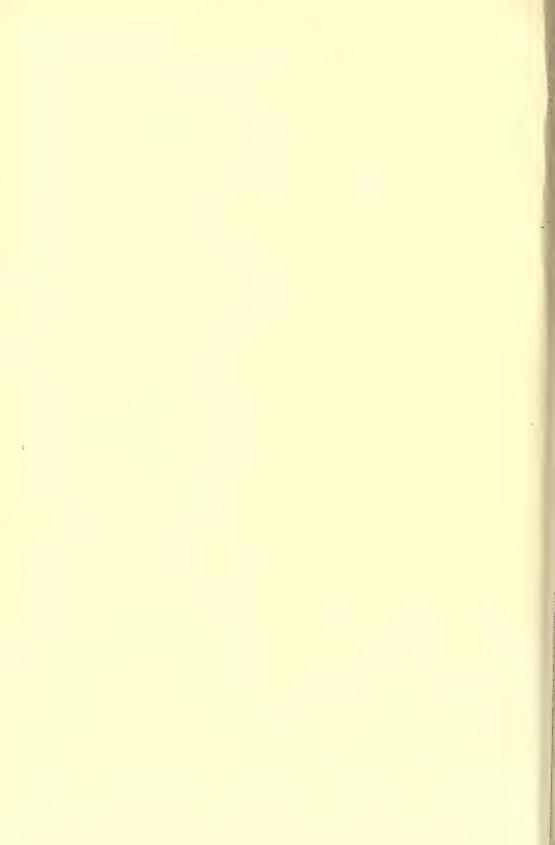

On pages 278 and 280, is printed the grant by Henry III to Ralph Neville dated July 19th, 11 Henry III, 1227; I have then gone on to state that "The original charter is now in the possession of the Society . . . A facsimile of it forms the frontispiece to this volume." This statement is not quite accurate, for on reference to the facsimile it will be seen that the date is November 16th,* 13 Henry III, 1228. This second charter is duly enrolled (Charter Roll, 13 Henry III, part 1, m. 14), but is not calendared in the printed Calendar. A careful collation of the two documents shows that they are identical, with the exception of some of the witnesses, the date, and a few trifling differences of spelling and contractions. It appears, therefore, that there were two distinct grants in substantially identical terms, one sixteen months after the other, and that the later of them was the root of title handed over on the purchase of the Inn by the Society. I can only suggest that the earlier document had been lost or destroyed, and that the later one was granted to replace it.

I much regret that this mistake was not discovered in time to correct the text.

roof, and it is impossible to form any sort of conjecture when such an event might be likely to take place: the danger is certainly very great; though the roof is in itself a very light one, yet the weight of iron, copper, and timber together, must be very considerable, pressing upon the side walls of the building without any beams or ties of any kind to keep the walls together. The effect of the insufficiency of the walls to support such a roof (notwithstanding the immense buttresses) is very visible, they have already yielded to the pressure of it, and I am satisfied would not resist the force which would be occasioned if it was to fall.

The Hon. Spencer Perceval, on being appointed K.C.

p. 277. The following letter from Michael Nolan, Esquire, one of the Barristers of this Society, was submitted to the consideration of the Benchers.

"Gentlemen,

"I take the liberty of laying before you, as presiding over that Society of which I am a member, a plan for reading Law

Lectures there.

"The Science of Municipal Law is at present studied in this Kingdom in a method different from that of every other species of Jurisprudence or Knowledge that is cultivated either in this country, or perhaps throughout Europe. Corporate regulations are imposed upon those who wish to become lawyers, and degrees are conferred to entitle them to practice, but no person is appointed to deliver that instruction to students on account of which these restrictions were originally imposed. To supply this deficiency, both of our Universities have instituted Professorships for the purpose of delivering Lectures upon this subject. But if such a system of instruction be found useful there, it is conceived that it would be more beneficial as well as more appropriate if established under the sanction of one of the Societies here.

* Charles Robinson, Esq., declined to serve.

[†] The Rt. Hon. Frederick Montagu declined to serve, on the ground of ill-health. [p. 253.]

"Because few, if any, young men apply earnestly to the study of the Law until they have quitted College and settled in some one of the Inns of Court.

"Because as it is from them that they are to be called to the practice of the Law, it is there most naturally that their inexperience should be assisted, their industry stimulated, and their progress in the Science ascertained.

"Besides this also a knowledge of Special Pleading, of drawing in Equity, and of the Practice of the several Courts, can only be learned where the Law is administered, and a system of Lectures, properly conceived, by inculcating a general acquaintance with the theory, along with the knowledge of these practical branches, would facilitate the progress of the student in each.

"If these reasons, Gentlemen, should induce you to p. 278. encourage the design, I beg leave most humbly to suggest that it will be most effectually advanced by the creation of the office of Law Lecturer to your Honourable Society. Such an institution will not be an absolute innovation, as it will in some degree resemble the ancient one of Reader, which has now fallen into disuse. But as an alteration in the manners of the times and the discipline of the Inns of Court would render the revival of that office inefficacious, I venture most humbly to propose that the office of Law Lecturer should be erected under the following regulations:—

"That the person filling it shall deliver publickly in your Hall a certain number of Lectures, upon such subjects and at such times as you may either chuse to specify or leave to his own discretion.

"That all members of the Inn shall be at liberty to attend these Lectures without paying anything whatever.

"That besides this he shall annually deliver an entire course of Lectures upon Law and Equity to such students as may voluntarily offer to become his pupils, provided they exceed the number of fifteen.

"That this course be private, and a certain compensation be paid by those who chuse to attend to it.

"That no salary be paid to the Lecturer by the Inn, and that he receive no other emolument from it than what he may derive from the sanction which his office will necessarily give to his private course.

"If, Gentlemen, you should deem it right to create this office and annex to it either these regulations or any others which to your wisdom may seem proper, I hope you will excuse me for soliciting your protection as a candidate to fill it. In so doing I cannot but p. 279. feel considerable reluctance, as I am too sensible of the importance of the employment not to perceive how difficult it will be to sustain it with effect. I can only urge in my excuse that I have been encouraged to make the application by several gentlemen of eminence in the profession, some of whom are of your own body.

"Of myself it would be presumption to speak, further than to crave your leave to observe that I have for this some time past turned my attention to this scheme; that I have made a considerable progress in planning out and preparing a course of Lectures upon the Municipal Law of England; that I was called to the Bar by your Honourable Bench five years ago; that since that period I have diligently attended the Courts at Westminster, regularly gone the Home Circuit, and used every other means in my power to qualify myself to discharge the general duties of my profession.

"To this enumeration I can only add that, should I be thought worthy of the employment, neither pains nor attention shall be wanting upon my part to render the institution advantageous to this Society in particular and useful to the general interests of the profession.

" I am, Gentlemen,
"With the most profound respect,
"Your most obedient and
"humble servant,
"M. NOLAN.

The following Resolutions were agreed upon by the p. 442. Committees of the four Inns of Court held at the Rolls House, June 13th, 1798, to be submitted to the respective Societies.

"That every Society be at liberty to continue or make such Rules respecting the keeping terms as now prevail or as they shall hereafter think fit. Provided that no student in any of the Inns of Court be permitted to keep a term in order to his being Called to the Bar without having been present in the Hall at least three times in such term at the time when Grace is said after dinner; and the proper officer is strictly enjoined to enforce this Rule, and, in case he shall find that any gentleman has left the Hall before Grace after dinner, that he do strike his name out of the list of persons present.

VOL. IV.

" This Rule to commence in Michaelmas Term next.

"That no person who shall have been admitted into any of the Inns of Court since the 24th of April last, or who shall hereafter be admitted, (except as hereinafter excepted), shall be called to the English Bar unless he shall previous to his keeping any of the terms requisite for that purpose have deposited with the Treasurer of the Society to which he belongs the sum of £100, the same to be returned without interest upon his being called to the Bar, or quitting the Society, or, in case of his death, to his personal representative. But this is not to excuse him from paying his duties regularly, nor from giving the usual bond upon admission.

"Provided that this Order shall not extend to any person who shall previous to his being called to the Bar produce a certificate of his being a Member of the Faculty of Advocates in Scotland, or of his having kept two years' terms in any of the Universities of Oxford, Cambridge or Dublin. And in case such deposit as aforesaid shall have been made, the same shall be immediately returned to him upon his producing such certificate as is above mentioned.

"Provided also that the last term and this present term shall be allowed to such persons who, having been admitted since the 24th of April last, shall have kept the same, in case the above deposit shall be made before the keeping of any other of the terms requisite to qualify such person to be called to the Bar.

"That the name and description of every candidate for being called to the Bar be hung up in the Hall a fortnight before he be

p. 448. On reading a letter from John Williams, gent., Vestry Clerk of the Parish of S. Dunstan in the West, in the County of Middlesex, dated this day, the 23rd inst., stating that John Wilmot, Esquire, had made a cheap purchase of the wooden houses at the south end of Chancery Lane, and in the most liberal manner proffered to sell them for the same sum to the City of London, provided that they would take them down and widen and improve that very narrow part of the Lane. That the City of London, upon the opinion of the Surveyor, who estimated the expenses of carrying the same into effect at the sum of £2,400, had made an Order that on the payment of £600 into their Chamber they would be at the remainder of the expense, and make the intended improvement. That the Vestry of the said Parish appointed a committee to promote so desirable an undertaking by a public voluntary subscription of the neighbouring inhabitants, and the said John Williams was directed by the Committee to entreat the favour of this Society's assistance to accomplish so laudable a design, as the sum already raised amounted to about £500 towards the amount necessary to commence the said improvement.

It is ordered that the sum of £50 be subscribed for improving the narrow part of Chancery Lane, and that the same be paid into the hands of the proper persons.*

Read a letter from M^r William Lyon of Gray's Inn, Attorney- p. 453. at-Law, Clerk to the Governors of Tancred's Charities, pointing out that the Rule requiring the deposit of £100 on admission would operate to the expulsion from the Bar of a class of young men admitted into the Society of Lincoln's Inn upon the foundation of M^r Tancred's Charities, as they are elected to their Studentships on the basis of their inability to go through their studies without the assistance of his charitable donation. Ordered that a conference be proposed on the subject with the Benchers of the other Societies.

The following petition of James Mackintosh, Esq., a Barrister of the Society, was read:-

"To the Benchers of the Honourable Society of Lincoln's Inn. "Gentlemen,

"Having the honour to be a Barrister of your Society, I take the liberty of humbly laying before you a plan which may, I hope, not be altogether without utility to students of law.

"I observe by your proceedings in [Feb., 1796],* that you then granted permission to M^r Nolan to read Lectures on the Law of England in your Hall, from which I am led to suppose that you have formed a favourable opinion of legal lectures as a part of the education of students.

"It is far from my wish to intrude into the province of Mr Nolan, for whom I have a high respect, and who I hope has not finally relinquished the prosecution of his useful plan.

"I have formed an idea of delivering a course of lectures on p. 4. another subject closely connected with our Municipal Law, and forming indeed the basis of the positive law of all states, I mean the Law of Nature and Nations.

"It would be not only perfectly unnecessary, but extremely impertinent, for me to presume to suggest to so learned a body as I have now the honour of addressing, the many important uses of this study, the solid foundations which it lays for the future improvement of the student, and the assistance which it may occasionally afford to the practising lawyer; nor need I remind you that it is scattered over many large and learned works, which make it not very easily accessible to students. It has not yet been exhibited in a form that makes it both easy and agreeable, in which respect there may be greater use in a course of lectures on this subject than on the Law of England.

"I am not aware that in either of our Universities it is made a subject of regular study, except by those few who intend to become Doctors of the Civil Law, and to practise in the Spiritual and Admiralty Courts.

"These considerations encourage me most humbly to solicit permission to deliver, either in your Hall or your Library, a course of Lectures on the Law of Nature and Nations, which you were pleased to grant to M^r Nolan for his lectures on the Law of England, subject to such conditions as you shall be pleased to prescribe.

I have the honour to be,
Gentlemen,
Your obedient humble servant,

IAMES MACKINTOSH.†

p. 43. Read the following letter from John Skynner, Esq., one of the Fellows of this Society:-

"Gentlemen,

"I had lately the honor of addressing you by a letter in which I acquainted you that M^r Melmoth had bequeathed to the Hon. Society of Lincoln's Inn some MS. Reports compiled by his father.

^{*} Lucy Lincoln was baptized in the Chapel on July 7th.

"At the same time I observed that there were some peculiar circumstances attending the bequest, which I should take the liberty of stating; and I now enter upon the explanation of them.

"The late Mr Melmoth, the testator, had prior to the year 1790 taken frequent occasion to mention to my father, the Rev. John Skynner, his intention of presenting me with the Reports in p. 44. question as soon as I should be of a sufficient age to be capable of deriving advantage from them; and he at one time actually delivered them into my father's hands to bring to town for me, but my father, finding it inconvenient to take charge of them, left them behind at Bath to be forwarded by some other conveyance. They were not however sent at that period. The testator having once also in conversation with me expressed his design of giving me the Reports, I, relying on this assurance and on the repeated declarations he had made to my father, wrote to Mr Melmoth in the year 1790 to remind him of his promise, and in a few days after my application I received from him a box containing the manuscripts, accompanied by a letter, an extract from which, so far as relates to the present subject, I transcribe:

> 'It affords me no common satisfaction to find you applying to me for my most honored father's manuscript Reports. I always intended to deposit them as a sacred treasure in your hands as soon as you should be old enough to appreciate their value, and only regretted that there would be always one circumstance wanting to heighten the just estimation of their intrinsic merit, as you had not the happiness of personally knowing the rare and exemplary virtues of the rare and excellent author. With these sentiments, and with a very sensible gratification to myself, I now deliver them up to you; happy in the thought that as you may have frequent occasion in the course of your future practice to consult his notes, you will have equal occasion to reflect on his example, and be excited to emulate his steps in the same laudable profession.'

"It seems unnecessary to observe that upon the receipt of the above-mentioned letter I considered myself the absolute owner of the manuscripts, under an unqualified gift made by Mr Melmoth, in conformity to his intention so frequently expressed.

" However, notwithstanding all that had passed, Mr Melmoth early in the year 1791 assumed a kind of controuling power over the manuscripts, and suggested a scheme for the publication of them. He was desirous that Mr Hargrave and myself should be joint Editors, and by way of preface to the work he himself proposed to write a short history of his father's life."

p. 45. [The letter goes on to state that M^r Melmoth gave up this plan, partly on the ground of expense and partly because of his

6. 46. failing powers; that after this he always treated the MSS. as his own; that prior to 1794 he made a will (subsequently revoked), and by a codicil thereto bequeathed the Reports to Lincoln's Inn,

p. 47. directing that they were to be chained together; that in 1795 he made a new will, whereby he gave the residue of his real and personal property to the Rev. John Skynner, but made no allusion

p. 48. to the MSS. in this will or in three subsequent codicils; that the codicil to the former will, dealing with the MSS., was proved with the latter will. Mr Skynner then puts in a claim to the MSS. on the ground of the absolute gift to him, and, in the alternative, that the bequest to the Inn was revoked by the revocation of the first will, and that consequently the MSS. passed under the residuary bequest to the Rev. John Skynner.]

p. 49. "The Manuscripts comprise a series of cases argued and determined in the Court of Chancery from the year 1700 to the year 1740 inclusive, many of which are to be found in the valuable collection of Mr Peere Williams, but a very considerable number of them have never yet met the public eye

And whereas I, John Skynner, of Lincoln's Inn aforesaid, as one of the executors of the said William Melmoth the testator, in a letter addressed by me to the Benchers of the said Society in the month of June last, informed them of the bequest aforesaid, and at the same time submitted to their consideration certain circumstances on which I endeavoured to set up an exclusive right to the said manuscript Reports, principally relying on a supposed gift thereof to me by the said testator in his life-time. And whereas I had the honor of attending yesterday at a Council of the Benchers of the said Society of Lincoln's Inn, and was there informed by the gentlemen who composed such Council that they had taken into their consideration the circumstances of the said bequest, and that they had resolved to relinquish their right to the said manuscript Reports, on condition of my stipulating to publish the same within the period of seven years. Now I, the said John Skynner, do hereby acknowledge the great obligation which I feel to the said Benchers for their liberal conduct towards me upon the occasion, and I do hereby engage that I will select such of the said manuscript Reports as may appear to me worthy of publication, and that I will within the period of seven years from the present Blacstone, and perhaps some difference may be observed in the others from the printed copies. I hope they may be of service in illustrating legal antiquities, as they are older than most of the same kind extant. I should take it as a favor if they were preserved with the same care as the MSS. of Sir Matthew Hale, as I apprehend them to be well worth such attention W. Falconer.

Inn enters into a bond with a surety or sureties in the penalty of £100 for the payment of all dues chargeable on Members of the Society, and which consist of Eating Commons for the terms they keep, or Absent Commons for those they do not keep; (a regular term kept amounts to £1 4s., and the Absent Commons for the terms not kept is the same); Preacher, 2s. 6d. per term; Pensions, 1s. 4d. per term; and on being admitted to chambers, or on Call to the Bar, there is a charge of £6 for Vacation Commons; and at the end of three years after Call, £12 more for Vacation Commons.

"A gentleman on his admission to the Society of Lincoln's

"It has not hitherto been usual to apply to Members for payment of any of their dues until they are either admitted to chambers, or begin to keep commons. "When admitted to chambers they are then charged with all dues in full from the time of their admission to the Society.

"When they begin to keep terms, to charge them only for Eating Commons, and not for any other part of their dues until they are called to the Bar, unless in the mean time they purchase chambers. Or in case they are not admitted to chambers or called to the Bar, they are not applied to until they leave the Society; and many gentlemen, from a knowledge of the above custom, I believe, never intend to apply for their names to be taken off the Books, altho' liable to the payment of £5 11s. 4d. for every year from the time of their admission, whenever the Society think proper to demand it.

"But in case a gentleman has been any number of years a Member and has never dined in the Hall, he is at liberty to withdraw his name on payment of £2 19s. 2d. fees to the Treasurer $\nu$. 150. and officers (by an Order of Council of the 9th of April, 1788), whereas, if he has once begun keeping terms, he from that moment becomes chargeable with all dues from the time of his admission to the Society, altho' it has not yet been customary to demand them until they are called to the Bar or admitted to chambers.

"The students for the Irish Bar pay in the same way, viz., for their Eating Commons only, while keeping their eight terms, and the remainder when they take their certificate, which they in general do as soon as they have kept their terms."

William Burroughs, Esq., a member of the Middle Temple, was for five years a student of Dublin University, where he obtained a Scholarship and several literary premiums, and became entitled to his B.A. degree; he was admitted at the Middle Temple in 1775, kept eight terms, and in 1778 was called to the Bar in Ireland; he practised there on Circuit and in the Superior Courts until the close of 1788; in 1789 he went to Calcutta, was admitted to the Bar in Bengal, and in 1790 was appointed, by the Marquis Cornwallis, Standing Counsel to the East India Company on the Bengal Establishment; in 1792 he was appointed Advocate General, the highest law officer of the Company, which he resigned in 1801, and returned to England; he is desirous of being called to the English Bar, and has attended for the purpose of keeping this term, but as he has shortly to go to Ireland, he wishes to be excused the remaining three terms. The Benchers of the Middle Temple consider that this is a case in which the General Rule of 1762 might be departed from, but wish to have the opinion of the other Inns of Court.

The Benchers of this Inn concur in that opinion.

Report from the Committee appointed to consider the state of the Library, and how it may be improved.

[The Committee recommend that a new Catalogue be made, in which the books are to be classified according to the subject-matter, with an index of names of authors. A separate catalogue of the MSS. should be added at the end. The Catalogue should be printed. They have found a competent person to undertake the work. The Library is deficient in many departments, and it is recommended that a considerable yearly sum be allowed out of the general income of the Society in aid of the ordinary fund.]

"Your Committee are very apprehensive that without adopting some such measure the Library is not likely to reach that pre-eminence which the Library of a law society should have over the collections of individual lawyers, and without which, as your Committee conceive, a due ampleness of the best sources of knowledge for assisting the study and practice of jurisprudence, in the scope of extended and profound research, will be unattainable."

Read the following Petition from the Principal and Ancients of Furnival's Inn:—

"To the Honourable the Masters of the Bench of the Honorable Society of Lincoln's Inn.

"The humble Petition of the Principal and Ancients of Furnival's Inn, on behalf of their Society,

"Sheweth,

"That your honorable Society by Indenture of Lease, bearing date the 13th day of December, 1758, without taking any fine, demised to the then Principal of Furnival's Inn and others on behalf of that Society, All that capital messuage, with the appurtenances, called Furnival's Inn; To hold from Michaelmas, 1756, for 61 years, under the old yearly rent of £8.

"That your Petitioners and their predecessors have ever since duly paid the said rent, and have for many centuries supported and maintained the buildings of the said Inn, which of late have become so antient and decayed that to keep them from time to time in a barely habitable state has wholly exhausted the funds of the said Society.

"That it appears to your Petitioners that the greater part, if not the whole, of the building must be very shortly pulled down and rebuilt, for which purpose it will be necessary to raise large sums of money, which your Petitioners will not be able to do without a renewal of their present lease, as there will remain unexpired at Michaelmas next but ten years of the term thereby granted.

"That your Petitioners and their predecessors have been a Society of Attornies, Solicitors and students for above 400 years, and from 1547 (a period of 260 years) have been tenants to and under the kind patronage and protection of your Honorable Society, who from time to time have treated your Petitioners' predecessors, on the renewals of their leases and other occasions, as a Society professing and promoting the study and practice of the Law, and not as private persons; and without a continuance of your indulgence to Furnival's Inn, it will be impossible for that Society to continue as such to subsist.

p. 6.

"That from ancient documents it appears that a family of the name of Furnival demised the soil to certain students of the law, for their express purpose of their accommodation and promoting the fair practice of that honorable profession: and 'tis hoped your Honors will at this day be disposed and well inclined to further the laudable plan and good intentions of the persons who originally formed and founded the Society of Furnival's Inn.

"Your Petitioners further represent that it does not appear that any fines were paid on renewals of their leases till 1671, and tho' small fines have been since paid on the several renewals (except the last in 1758), they were demanded at times when the Society of Furnival's Inn was known to be in flourishing circumstances. At those times country Attornies and Solicitors made a point of being admitted of the Inns of Chancery (from the fees on which admissions a considerable revenue arose to the Society), which is seldom or never the case now, and by the late Act of Parliament the duty only on such admissions is £20, a sum so large, and the remaining term in the lease being so short, that there has not been a single admission into Furnival's Inn since the tax was imposed.

"That the general practice of the law appears to be on the decline, and infinitely less lucrative than it was at the periods of former renewals, and, besides the annual licenses, the stamps, the fees of office, and other expences of carrying the profession on, have been imposed, and have greatly enhanced since those days, and the taste and luxury of the present age induce the professors of the law to reside in the great Inns of Court and desert those of Chancery where their residences were antiently intended, and indeed enjoined, to be; whereby the Inns of Chancery lose their little dues and support; and yet the charges of builders and other tradesmen, and the Land, House, Window and other Taxes, are greatly increased.

"At the times of granting the former renewals the buildings were in good condition, and yielded and were likely to yield fair and adequate rents, which then afforded good reasons for demanding fines, but now no such reasons can be urged for such a demand.

"For these, among many other reasons which might be urged, after all due and grateful acknowledgments for your past favors, patronage and protection, your Petitioners humbly hope your Honors, as the Trustees of a great and rich Society, will be pleased to encourage your Petitioners to exert their endeavours, and with a truly public spirit to co-operate with your Honors in retrieving the languishing state of the Society of Furnival's Inn.

"And your Petitioners pray that your Honors will be pleased to grant them a renewal of their lease, on such fair and reasonable terms as your Honors shall under all circumstances think fit, and such as in your wisdom may tend to the benefit of both Societies; and, as in gratitude and duty bound, your Petitioners shall ever pray, etc."

Read the following statement from the Bar respecting the performing of Exercises by Students, in order to their being called to the Bar:—

"The Bar of Lincoln's Inn represent to the Bench the following statement:

"In the year 1794, to settle doubts which were then raised concerning the practice of this Society as to the allowing persons particularly circumstanced to perform exercises in order to be admitted to the Bar, the following Rule was entered in the Books of the Society:-

"'Lincoln's Inn Hall, 23rd June, 1794. It being the opinion of the gentlemen of the Bar that any person who has been in the situation of clerk, and has done the offices and received the perquisites of a clerk, ought not to be received to perform exercises to entitle him to be called to the Bar, they have accordingly refused to permit it.'

"In the course of this term a gentleman (otherwise in every respect unobjectionable), but precisely within both the spirit and the letter of the above Rule, has applied to do his exercises, and in order to persuade us to depart from the Rule in his case, he has adduced several precedents of persons who, under similar circumstances, have at various periods been admitted. But we thought the Rule imperative upon us, and the application has in consequence been withdrawn for the present. We must, however, confess (tho' we approve highly of this Rule, and see no reason for its abrogation) that we feel the hardship and inconsistency of rejecting persons in this Inn for reasons which form no ground of objection in the other Societies, and we therefore submit to you the propriety of communicating to the Benchers of the other Inns of Court the Rules of this Inn, that there may be adopted some general and uniform Regulations for the admission of persons to the Bar.

"In 1793 the Bar came to a resolution not to hear the exercises of any Student until he produced a Certificate in the following form, subscribed by some member of the Inn, who is a Barrister, and resident in London.

"'I know A. B. of (here as full a description as possible), am well acquainted with his character, and believe him to be an unexceptionable person to be called to the Bar.

" 'C. D. (date and residence)."

"And the Barristers also came to a resolution not to hear the exercises of any gentleman who has been admitted an Attorney or Solicitor, until his name shall have been taken off the Roll, or to hear the exercise of any gentleman who acts as clerk to an Attorney or Solicitor.

"The Bar also determined that a Student should not perform more than three exercises in any one term.

"And in Michaelmas Term, 1807, the Bar also determined that no person who has written for hire in the newspapers shall be admitted to do exercises.*

"That no person in trade shall be admitted to do exercises.

"We beg leave further to suggest that it would much promote this desirable object if the different Societies would respectively communicate their Rules on this subject, and if the names of persons applying to be called to the Bar were to be sent to each of the other Societies, and were to be hung up in their respective Halls one term previously to the Call; and that no person should be admitted to the Bar without such notice having been transmitted by the Steward of the Inn.

[A long report by William Selwyn and Edmund Dayrell, Esquires, on Furnival's Inn. They produced a plan of the existing buildings, and several alternative proposals for rebuilding. They recommended that the site be let on building leases. plan numbered 4 was approved of the most, "because at the same time that the advantage of the Society of Lincoln's Inn is thereby consulted in procuring a large reserved rent on granting leases of the several houses and buildings, the Society professing the law in Furnival's Inn will not be totally annihilated, but regard will be had to the interest and convenience of the solicitors, attornies and agents for country attornies, who have hitherto had the exclusive enjoyment of chambers in Furnival's Inn, and to whom it may be important to be situated and have chambers in the vicinity of the Inns of Court and the Law Offices . . . It was very much to have been wished that satisfactory evidence could have been obtained as to the eight acres of pasture land demised by the Society of Lincoln's Inn in their several leases at several distant periods of time to the Principal and Antients of Furnival's Inn, but we have not been able to procure such evidence, so as to enable us to ascertain whether these eight acres do still remain part of the possessions of this Society, or whether they have been alienated, and if alienated, at what time and in what manner they have been so alienated. We do not mean therefore to preclude or in any manner to discourage any inquiry or search to be made by other persons upon this subject at any future time."]

[Annexed is a report by Messrs. Johnson and Sons,

Surveyors, who made the plan of Furnival's Inn.]

"There is great reason to believe that the lands and tenements which now constitute this Inn originally belonged to a family of Dagworth, who were hereditary Ushers of the Exchequer, and whose daughter and heir, Thomasine de Dagworth, married Sir William Furnival, probably in the reign of Edward the Third, or in the early part of Richard the Second."

Read the following memorial from Henry Silverlock, Esq.

"To the Masters of the Bench of the Honorable Society of Lincoln's Inn.

"The Memorial of Henry Silverlock of Serjeants' Inn, one of the Fellows of the Society,

"Sheweth that on the 30th April, 1789, your Memorialist was admitted a Fellow of your Honorable Society, and kept all the necessary terms within that and the following four years; and has since paid many sums of money to the Society in respect of chambers purchased by him, and otherwise.

"That your Memorialist has acted as a Conveyancer for nearly twenty years past, during which period he has been and still is resorted to on business of the first importance and respectability, and has conducted himself therein with an irreproachable character, and so as to be held in esteem and repute by many of the most eminent Solicitors.

"That it having always been his intention to be called to the Bar whenever his professional friends should think it adviseable, your Memorialist did in Michaelmas Term, 1807, make the usual application for the performance of exercises, when he was informed that by a general Order of the Bench no exercise could be given to any person who had ever received a salary from, or fees as clerk to, a Conveyancer, etc.

"It is well known that your Memorialist formerly acted as clerk to and as a draftsman under the direction of the late Mr. Holiday of Lincoln's Inn, who always treated him with great attention and respect, and he little expected that, after a long series of industrious application, his ever having been in those situations would preclude him from obtaining that degree of rank in the profession which was always the chief object of his ambition.

"But your Memorialist respectfully submits that the Order above alluded to is an ex post facto law with regard to and ought not to be enforced as against him, in as much as it was not made until the year 1794, being five years after he was admitted a member of and had kept his terms in Lincoln's Inn, and might have performed the usual exercises, if he had required them, as a matter of course, according to then subsisting Rules and Regulations of the Society.

"Your Memorialist therefore prays that the hardships of his case may be taken into consideration, and that you will be pleased to determine that the Order of 1794 shall no longer operate to his prejudice; or to grant him such other relief in the premises as in your wisdom may seem meet.

of the Society, stating that he was admitted to the Society in Michaelmas term, 1805, and having previously practised as an Attorney and Solicitor, he caused his name to be struck off the Rolls of the different Courts in which he had been admitted: That in 1808 he was appointed by the Lords Commissioners of the Treasury one of the ten Inspectors General under the Statute 48 George III, cap. 141, sec. 5;* that in Michaelmas Term last, wishing to begin to perform the necessary exercises previous to Call to the Bar, he received a letter from the Steward stating that the gentlemen of the Bar Table were of opinion that the office of Inspector General "was incompatible with the practice of a Barrister, and a disqualification to his exercises, and observing that several persons at the Bar had accepted the like situation, but that upon the appointment they had instantly retired from the profession." The Steward reported that by the death of the late Rt. Hon. Spencer Perceval there are two sets of chambers fallen into the disposition of this Society, viz., one set, No. 25, Old Buildings,

Resolved that, in consideration of the irreparable loss which his family have sustained by his premature and sudden death by an act of horrible and detestable assassination,* and as a tribute of affectionate regard for the memory of so illustrious an ornament of our profession and Society, it is proper and expedient that we should avail ourselves of the opportunity of offering the chambers to the representatives of our departed friend.

The following answers were received:—

" My dear Sir,

"Mrs. Perceval is so deeply impressed with the kindness of the Society of Lincoln's Inn in testifying, as they have done in a way so gratifying and consolatory, their regard for the memory of my dear brother, that she will not be satisfied without writing to you in her own hand to request that you will convey to them her most grateful thanks. But I cannot let her answer go without accompanying it with a few lines from myself to thank you for your kind letter.

"Indeed, my dear Sir, the loss of such a brother, from whose affection and friendship I may say, with perfect truth, I had never been separated for one hour from our boyish days, in the horrid manner in which he was taken from us, has been a severe shock, and I have deeply felt it. However, thank God! we are all wonderfully well, and must now recollect the several duties we have to perform, and not neglect them. God's will in all be done.

I shall beg leave to name my eldest son, Spencer, and my fourth son, Dudley Montagu, as the two on which, if they please, I should wish the choice to fall.

It was thereupon resolved unanimously that Spencer Perceval, p. 166. Esq., the eldest son, aged 16 years, and Dudley Montagu Perceval, the fourth son, aged 11 years, of the late Rt. Hon. Spencer Perceval, one of the Masters of this Bench, be admitted Fellows of this Society without any expense; and that all expenses of such admission be defrayed out of the funds of this Society.

The Masters of the Bench with one voice desired that these admissions to the Society and to the chambers of the late Mr. Perceval might take place in this manner in order to give them an opportunity in the persons of his sons of paying this small tribute of respect, veneration, and affection, to the memory of one of their most illustrious members, whose premature death has involved them, in common with the whole Nation, in the deepest affliction, of one whose splendid abilities reflected lustre upon this Society, and whose virtues while he lived attracted universal admiration and esteem, and have held up to the present and future members of this House a bright example for imitation.

p. 171. The Bar, having declined to hear the final exercise of Mr. George Manners, previous to his Call to the Bar, at the request of the Bench made the following statement of their reasons for such refusal:—

First, that he has for several years been the editor and proprietor of a periodical work called "The Satirist," containing numerous instances of libellous and unjustifiable attacks upon private character, evidently inserted with a view to profit.

Secondly, that one of such libels has been the subject of a criminal prosecution against Mr. Manners in the Court of King's Bench, upon which he has been convicted, and undergone a punishment of three months' imprisonment.

Thirdly, that a Bill of Indictment has been found, and a prosecution is now pending against Mr. Manners for another private libel in "The Satirist."

Fourthly, that in the cause Finnerty v. Tipper, tried before Sir James Mansfield in February, 1809, the conduct of Mr. Manners, as connected with "The Satirist," appears highly disrespectable.

" To the Masters of the Bench,

"Gentlemen,

"I am commanded by the Lords Commissioners of His Majesty's Treasury to acquaint you that they have received a communication from the Lord Chancellor and Vice Chancellor of England in regard to the erection of a new court, in order that they may be enabled to sit at the same time; and as it appears obviously to be matter of essential importance to the profession, to the suitors, and to the public that this Court should be as nearly contiguous as possible to the court wherein the Lord Chancellor now sits, my Lords request you will have the goodness to inform them whether you could accommodate the public with any scite in Lincoln's Inn for the erection of such Court, and, if so, under what terms and arrangements you would be disposed to make the grant.

Resolved that the following reply be sent :— "Sir.

"I am commanded by the Masters of the Bench of the Honourable Society of Lincoln's Inn to inform you that they have been honoured by the receipt of your letter containing a communication of the Lords of the Treasury relative to the erection of a new court for the administration of Justice, and of their readiness to co-operate in any plan that will contribute to the convenience of the suitors, the profession and the public.

"That for this purpose they have resolved to accommodate the public with a scite in Lincoln's Inn for the erection of such court, and have appointed a Committee to communicate with their Lordships on the terms and arrangements to be made for accomplishing so important an object, and that the Committee will be happy to attend their Lordships at any time they will be pleased to appoint.

^{*} He was appointed Serjeant in 1801. The old custom for Serjeants to leave the Innimmediately on their call seems to have died out to some extent, though it does not appear that there was any formal resolution or Order on the point. In 1819, Serjeant Cross went through the usual ceremony of taking leave, but did not withdraw his name from the Books of the Society. See post.

The Committee appointed consisted of the Treasurer [Edmund Dayrell], the Master of the Rolls [Sir William Grant], the Vice-Chancellor [Sir Thomas Plumer], the Attorney General [Sir William Garrow], and William Adam, James Allan Park, Charles Thomson, and Nathaniel Gooding Clarke, Esquires; any two to be a quorum.

Resolved that the site to be proposed for the new court be following proposals of the Committee:-

I. That the site of the new court shall be the ground on the west side of the Council Chamber of Lincoln's Inn, distant from the Hall only about 30 yards, provided the terms of compensation can be settled with those who may be injured by erecting the building on this spot.

2. That the space of ground to be applied to this purpose shall be in length 52 feet and in width 29 feet.

3. That this space of ground, which is now the absolute property of the Inn, and which has been estimated to be of the value of £1,500, shall be allowed to be made use of for this building without any pecuniary compensation to the Society, subject only to the terms hereinafter mentioned.

4. That in order to provide a proper compensation to p. 267. Mr. Greenhill, the proprietor of one of the sets of chambers which will be depreciated by this plan, a new set of chambers over the intended Court, together with the attics over them, shall be built at the expense of the public; and that the Preacher of the Inn shall be compensated by having Mr. Greenhill's present chambers added to those now occupied by the Preacher, with such internal alterations as may be deemed necessary, the same to be finished also at the public expense.

5. That the whole expense of the building and fitting up of the new Court and the rooms adjoining . . . shall be defrayed by the public.

6. That the plan, when approved by the Lords of the Treasury and the Society, shall be executed by the Surveyor of the Society, the public engaging to allow a sum not exceeding £7,500, on the condition that a correct account shall be rendered of the expenditure, and if it falls short of that sum that the overplus shall be returned to the public.

7. That the whole of these buildings shall be the property of the Society of Lincoln's Inn, subject to such term as may be assigned in the new chambers to Mr. Greenhill, and subject to the right of the public to make use of the new court and the rooms adjoining, for the administration of justice therein, whenever the same shall be required for that purpose.

8. That the future expense of keeping in repair, painting, etc., of the new court and the rooms adjoining shall be defrayed by the public, but of the rest of the building by the Society or their tenants.

Society of Furnival's Inn.

"Sheweth,

"That for the space of three hundred years prior to the year 1638 the Society of Furnival's Inn quietly enjoyed the profession and government of the said Society of Furnival's Inn, and the house, chambers, and buildings belonging thereto, as a Law Society, at the yearly rent of £3 6s. 8d., which had been constantly paid for the house and premises to the said Society of Lincoln's Inn and those from whom the said Society of Lincoln's Inn claim.

for practitioners and students of the Law.

"That in or about the year 1648, the said yearly rent of £3 6s. 8d. was increased to the yearly rent of £5 per annum, (exclusive of Bland's Buildings which formerly belonged to and were occupied by the Society of Furnival's Inn), and in the year 1761, further increased to the yearly rent of £8 (exclusive of Bland's Buildings); at which rent of £8 your Petitioners now hold the said house, chambers, and buildings (exclusive of Bland's Buildings).

"That inasmuch as the present lease, under which your Petitioners now hold the said house, chambers and premises, will expire at Michaelmas next, your Petitioners for several years past have not been able to let or occupy many of the chambers belonging to the said house to advantage.

"That it has been found upon enquiry from your Steward that the members of the Society have of late years greatly increased, and in particular that the number of Barristers who now dine regularly in Hall has doubled within the last twenty years, amounting in 1798 to about 15 at an average, and at present to about 30, As eleven only out of this number can have places at the Bar Table, it happens continually (except on Sundays, and sometimes on Saturdays) that Barristers of five or six years' and often of longer standing are oblidged to dine wherever they can find seats at the Students' Table, and where the attendance and accommodation are very inferior to what their brethren at the Bar Table enjoy.

"Under these circumstances, the undersigned very respectfully request that the Honorable the Benchers would be pleased to order the establishment of an additional Bar Mess. Having understood that the Hall, in the course of the ensuing vacation, is to be in some respects altered, it has occurred to the undersigned that on this occasion the Bar Table might be made equal in length to the Benchers [? benches] for the Court of Chancery behind it, which would be exactly sufficient for the additional mess requested.

"This proposal, however, is merely intended as a suggestion p. 234. for accomplishing the object in view with the least possible change in the order and arrangement of the Hall. Should the Benchers be pleased to grant this Petition, the undersigned will feel much obliged to them for their kindness, in whatever way it may be judged most expedient that the accommodation should be afforded."

He now states that he is not aware that any Rule or Order of the Society has been infringed, and that the practice has been sanctioned by long usage, not only in this Society, but also at Gray's Inn and at both the Temples. prays that, as he has served the Society with diligence and zeal for twenty-eight years, and is not conscious of any, even the slightest, breach of fidelity, and as if he has fallen into error he has done so in common with so many of his superiors, no Order may be made to his prejudice; and that he may not now in the evening of life, after having hitherto maintained a character unimpeached in every antecedent stage of it, have the mortification of experiencing what to him will be the severest source of misery and affliction, that displeasure of those whom it has always been, and is, his warmest endeavour and greatest pride to serve, honour and obey. "Your Petitioner begs most respectfully to represent to your Honors that he is, and has been for more than 20 years past, the owner and occupier of the house abutting on the north wall of your garden in Lincoln's Inn, next Great Turnstile, being separated by a passage of only four feet, three of which belong to your Honorable Society, for which a Turkey, as an acknowledgment in rent, is annually paid. That in consequence of the said wall being very high, great inconvenience has always been experienced, but your Petitioner never thought himself entitled to prefer any request on account thereof, as the said wall was of the same height before he became possessed of the said premises. For some time past, however, the evil has been increasing, the house being more completely debarred of the light and air by reason of the trees, which are grown to a great height, but these trees are no otherwise an evil to him than as by their branches they in effect become an addition to the height of the said wall."

"Being employed by the Honorable the Commissioners on the Public Records in the preparation of a new and enlarged edition of the Rolls of Parliament, I take the liberty of enclosing a letter from Mr. Caley relative to the use and examination of Sir Matthew Hale's MSS. preserved in your Library. These MSS. having been in part printed in the first edition of the Rolls of Parliament, I trust that you will consider that the restriction in the will of the testator does not apply when the public service is concerned."

"22, Parliament St., 19th May, 1824.

"Understanding that some further explanations are required by your Worships respecting the permission to use the MSS. in your Library, for which I have lately applied, I beg leave to state that it is the wish of the Commissioners on the Public Records that the new edition of the Rolls of Parliament should comprehend as many documents illustrating the history of the laws and Constitution as can be brought within the plan of the work; a permission, therefore, restricted to such documents only as have been already published, could not enable the editor to act according to the spirit of the instructions which he has received.

"Whatever might have been the motives which induced Sir Matthew Hale to prohibit the publication of the MSS. bequeathed by him to your Honorable Society, I humbly submit that the power of dispensing with that prohibition is vested in your worshipful Bench. Your predecessors exercised that power on the application of the House of Lords, and the permission now requested arises

* The Steward reported that on Thursday last, the 27th inst., being the day of perambulation of Parish Officers, the Church Warden (Mr. Farlow) and Officers, with the Beadle and children of the Parish of St Dunstan's in the West, came into the New Square, to beat, as they alleged, the bounds of the Parish. The Beadle was sent to the Steward's Office to demand the key of the Kitchen Garden, which (by direction of two Masters of the Bench) was refused, and the Church Warden and Officers were informed that if they entered the Kitchen Garden, an action would be brought against them for trespass. They appeared very much dissatisfied, and desired that it might be remembered that they had demanded permission to go into the Kitchen Garden in order to beat the bounds of the Parish of St. Dunstan's. When they were told that they had no right to go into the Kitchen Garden, as it was not their bounds, their reply was, that having come to the outside and demanded admission, they thought it sufficient, and went away without making any other attempt to get into the Garden.

I. That the Societies of the Middle and Inner Temple and Gray's Inn allow one bottle of port wine to each full mess of students.

2. That the average number of students' messes in our Society from 1816 to 1825, amounts to 1,980 messes for each year, which, at a bottle of wine per mess, will require 3 pipes and 9 dozen of wine for their annual supply, computing 52 dozen to the pipe.

the yearly quantity of wine would not exceed four pipes.

"That it be proposed to the other Societies that all persons of the full age of 24 years and upwards be admitted to the Bar after keeping twelve terms, provided during five years immediately prior to the Call they had not been in any trade or business, and in all other respects be entitled to be called to the Bar, according to the existing usages, Orders and Regulations of the several Inns of Court."

Moved by John Beames, Esq.:—

"That the thanks of this Society be given to William Selwyn, Esq., one of the Masters of the Bench, for his able superintendence of the preparation of the Catalogue of the Books in the Library."

Upon the Resolution being moved, it was suggested that p. 423. there was no precedent of a vote of thanks by this Bench to any individual Bencher for services performed; therefore, although the Bench was unanimously of opinion that Mr. Selwyn deserved their best thanks for his very valuable services, they regretted their inability to make any Order.

Report of the Committee relative to building a new Hall:— p. 439. Your Committee have examined the Hall, and the kitchens and offices belonging thereto, and also the garden adjoining, and have consulted with Mr. Wigg, the Surveyor of the Society, for the purpose of ascertaining whether the present Hall can be enlarged, either in length or width, so as to afford sufficient space for dinner tables for the members of the Society, who at present dine in the Hall, or are charged for their dinners, without being able to dine there except by waiting until other members have dined; and your Committee and Mr. Wigg are of opinion that the present Hall cannot be enlarged for the above purpose, except by taking it down and rebuilding it, and that it could not be taken down and rebuilt between the sittings after Trinity Term and Michaelmas Term, so as to be fit for the sittings of the Lord Chancellor or the Commissioners of the Great Seal,* or for the reception of the members of the Society in Michaelmas Term, or for a considerable period afterwards; and that there is not any other building in Lincoln's Inn in which the sittings of the Lord Chancellor or the Commissioners of the Great Seal could be held, or in which the members of the Society could dine, during the time that the new Hall was erecting.

Your Committee have examined the various parts of the gardens and other parts of Lincoln's Inn in which a new Hall and other requisite buildings might be erected, and they are of opinion that the most eligible place for the erection of such Hall and buildings will be adjoining to the south end of the Stone Building, that the vacant ground there contains space sufficient, and that the western front of such Hall and offices may be erected with a pediment, to correspond with the pediment at the north end of the

Charles Thomas Penrose, gentleman, is appointed to make the Tancred Oration.

Read the following letter from J—— H——, Esq., a Barrister p. 469. of the Society, relative to the demand for payment to the Preacher's Roll:

"When I became a member of your Society sixteen years ago, a friend of mine, who had been himself brought up to the Bar, undertook to see the officers of the Inn, and remove every difficulty to which I might be exposed in consequence of the well-known practice of Quakers in refusing all clerical payments; and never having had a demand for the Preacher's Dues till within a few weeks, I naturally supposed that, with that liberal feeling which I have so often experienced from members of the Church of England, the claim was not intended to be enforced against me.

"I have lately discovered to my regret that for a long course of years the gentleman alluded to continued to pay the 2s. 6d. a term on my behalf, and on it ceasing for a considerable time to be so discharged, I am at length applied to myself.

"It only remains for me therefore to throw myself upon your indulgent consideration, and whilst aware of your legal claim upon me, I am ready to trust that you will not think it unworthy of your character as Christians and as gentlemen, to pass over in silence this trifling act of non-conformity. At the same time, that my notions may not be misconstrued, I enclose £20, to be applied either to the Library or to the general purposes of the Inn, as you in your discrection may judge fit. It may at least suffice to show that selfishness or avarice is not the spring of my conduct in this business."

Ordered that the amount due be deducted for the general purposes of the Society, and that the balance of the £20 be returned to Mr. H——.

The Steward reported that on Friday, the 21st of October last, as some workmen were engaged in excavating by the side of the area steps at No. 9 in the New Square, the bones of a male skeleton were found, nearly under the passage leading into Serle Street, and deposited in the Steward's Office; that by direction of the Benchers in town, application was made to the Magistrates at the Police Office, Bow St., who recommended that an inquest should be held. The inquest was held in the Council Chamber on the 24th, before Thomas Sterling, Esq., the Coroner, and a Jury of 17 gentlemen residing in the Inn [names given]. The following verdict was returned:—

"That the skeleton bones were found buried in the earth, and that there is no evidence by what means the said person came to his death, or how, by whom, or when, the bones were there deposited."

The Coroner having given his warrant to bury the bones of a man unknown, application was made to the Treasurer for instructions, who directed that the remains should be placed in a coffin, and buried under the Chapel.

administration of Justice.'*

"I am further desired to inform you that it is the opinion of the members of this Society that Lincoln's Inn Fields will form the most convenient and appropriate site for the proposed new Courts, and that as the establishment of the Courts in the immediate neighbourhood of Lincoln's Inn cannot fail to contribute greatly to the advantage of the owners and occupiers of chambers in that Inn, I venture to express a hope that the contemplated measure may have the benefit of your support. And in case you should think it expedient, it would probably be advantageous that a deputation from this Committee might be put in communication with the Treasurer or other persons representing your Honorable Society, with a view to such considerations as may be deemed necessary.

"We, the undersigned, Barristers of this Inn, beg to present the following Memorial to the Worshipful the Benchers of the

"That only six messes are reserved in Hall for the use of Barristers, and which are filled by seniority at the moment grace is said.

"That a table of four messes is reserved (by the courtesy of the Hall) for the use of the junior Barristers; these places are not occupied by seniority but by priority of entrance into the Hall.

"That altho' no one takes a place at this table unless personally present, it is yet impossible on most days to secure a seat within five minutes after the doors are opened (half-past four o'clock).

"That before half-past four there is an assemblage at the Hall door, and that immediately after it is opened, every place at the Students' Tables is taken by the custom of turning down plates by those who are present, for themselves and friends, who are thus saved the trouble of so early an attendance.

"That the Hall being in the immediate neighbourhood of the chambers of so many Barristers makes it a matter of great convenience that they should dine there, besides other considerations too obvious to be specially mentioned.

"That in order to be able to dine in Hall, the junior Barristers of your Inn must both waste half an hour in Hall before dinner, and also be exposed to an unseemly rush at the opening of the door.

"Your Memorialists beg to place these facts before you. They would suggest that, since the Hall is nearly twice filled every day, much of the inconvenience might be avoided by appointing more tables for the use of the Barristers, or allowing them to dine either at first or second Hall. Should this however be considered impracticable, they trust that your wisdom will apply such a remedy as may be the means of preventing the disgraceful inconvenience complained of."

"The proposed building being thus entirely detached, it is unnecessary to adapt its style of architecture to any already in the Inn, but as the building is for a purpose to which collegiate style of architecture is most appropriate, Mr. Hardwick has selected that for the design he has now the honour to submit, and of the period towards the end of the 16th century, before the admixture of Italian architecture."

LINCOLN'S INN,

30th day of October, 1845.

A NARRATIVE OF THE QUEEN'S VISIT ON THE OPENING OF THE HALL.

On the Hall being completed, it was by Order in Council of the 29th of July, Ordered that it should be referred to a Committee to be named by the Treasurer, to consider relative to an Invitation to Her Majesty on the opening of the Hall, in order that the ceremony of opening it should, if possible, be graced and honoured by the presence of the Queen. Communication in the proper quarter being made, it was found that there was no objection on the part of Her Majesty to follow the precedent of Oueen Elizabeth, and on the 6th of October, on a special visit for the purpose being made to Windsor Castle by the Treasurer, J. A. F. Simpkinson, Esq., the Vice-Chancellor of England, and William Selwyn, Esq., a formal acceptance of the invitation was given. It was then arranged that Her Majesty would be present at a déjeûner on the thirtieth of October. Accordingly, no time was lost in making the necessary preparations, and an advertizement was inserted in the daily newspapers, requesting all Barristers of Lincoln's Inn, who wished to attend the ceremony, to put down their names before a certain day, as it was important to know how many would attend. About 380 put down their names, and afterwards it was considered proper that certain students should attend.

The 30th day of October having arrived, and admission being only to be had by tickets, there was no disorder or crowding in any part of the day. Many Barristers attended in their professional costume, walking about the Inn singly, or in twos and threes.

Many ladies also attended, who had seats in the gallery at the end of the Hall, chiefly either wives or daughters of the Benchers.

The Queen's Counsel wore their silk gowns and the long full-bottomed wig; Lord Cottenham, Lord Campbell, and the Speaker,* wore their black velvet Court dresses, the three Vice-Chancellors† their full-dress Judges' wigs, and Lord Bexley‡ his blue and gold official dress as a former Minister of the Crown.

For some hours before the arrival of the Queen all Lincoln's Inn was in commotion, but the Hall doors were to be closed at one o'clock, and as that hour approached the Hall became fuller; all steps turned thitherward, and soon the tables became occupied. At the top of the Hall a table was placed upon the dais for the Queen, His Royal Highness the Prince Albert, and the other guests who accompanied the Queen, the Benchers, and the Preacher of the Inn; and then, transversely,* four tables, reaching to the bottom of the Hall, were devoted to the Bar and such of the students as were permitted to attend. Each plate was numbered. and the Barristers were placed according to their seniority. The tables were all handsomely and substantially decorated and furnished, the entertainment being a cold one. The band of the Coldstream Guards attended, and played during the time Her Majesty was in the Hall.

At the top of the Hall, from time to time, appeared not only the Benchers, but the Cabinet Ministers who were invited. Lord Campbell was one of the first to make his appearance, and the Duke of Wellington, dressed as a Field Marshal, but entirely undecorated. Lord Lincoln made his appearance as a Cabinet Minister.† All the Benchers being assembled and the hour of arrival drawing nigh, the procession for receiving Her Majesty, headed by the Treasurer, made its way down the Hall, and placed itself at the south-east entrance of the Hall; and shortly afterwards the Queen, attended by Prince Albert, four of the Ladies in Waiting and certain high Officers of the Household, arrived.

The party came in five private carriages, attended by a body p. 43. of the Life Guards, and soon in the Hall the National Anthem was heard. A few moments after, Mr. Doyle, the Steward, announced "The Queen!" Her Majesty immediately entered, passing up the middle of the Hall, leaning on Prince Albert's arm, and preceded by the Treasurer walking backwards, and amidst loud and hearty cheering. Her Majesty walked to the Library, followed by her Ladies, the Cabinet Ministers, † Officers of State, and the Benchers, who came two and two, according to their date of election to the Bench. The Queen wore a blue drawn silk bonnet, with a blue feather, a dress of Limerick lace, and a scarlet shawl with a broad gold edging.

p. 44.

In the Library the Queen, seated on a Chair of State, held a short levee and received an Address from the Benchers, the Barristers (who were represented by Mr. Montague Chambers, Queen's Counsel, but created too recently to be elected to the Bench, and four senior Barristers), and the Students or Fellows, two of whom were also present. The Address was read by the Treasurer to the Queen, on his knee, and was as follows:—

" Most Gracious Sovereign!

"We, your faithful subjects, the Treasurer and Masters of the Bench, the Barristers and Fellows of the Society of Lincoln's Inn, entreat your Majesty's permission humbly to testify the joy and gratitude inspired by your august presence. The edifice in which, under such happy auspices, we are now for the first time assembled, is adorned with memorials of many servants of the Crown, eminent in their talents, their learning and their integrity. To the services, as recorded in History, of these our distinguished predecessors. we appeal in all humility for our justification in aspiring to receive your Majesty beneath this roof.

"Two centuries have nearly passed away since the Inns of Court were so honoured by the presence of the Reigning Prince.*

"We cannot therefore but feel deeply grateful for a mark so conspicuous of your Majesty's condescension, and of your gracious regard for the Profession of the Law.

"It is our earnest desire to deserve this proof of your Majesty's favour by a zealous execution of the trust reposed in us, to guard and maintain the dignity of the Bar of England.

"In our endeavours to this end we shall but follow in the course which it has been your Majesty's royal pleasure to pursue. Signally has your Majesty fostered the independence of the Bar and the purity of the Bench, by distributing the honours, which you have graciously bestowed on the profession, among the members of all parties in the State.

"Permit me also, most gracious Sovereign, to offer your Majesty our sincere congratulations on the great amendments of the Law which have been effected since your Majesty's accession to the Throne, throughout many portions of your vast Empire.

"The pure glory of these labours will be dear to your Majesty's Royal heart; for it arises from the welfare of your subjects.

"That your Majesty may long reign over a loyal, prosperous and contented people, is our devout and fervent prayer to Almighty God."

The following reply, which Her Majesty received from Sir

James Graham,* was then read :-

"I receive with cordial satisfaction this dutiful address. My beloved Consort and I have accepted with pleasure your invitation, for I recognize the services rendered to the Crown at various periods of our history by distinguished members of this Society; and I gladly testify my respect for the profession of the Law by which I am aided in administering Justice, and in maintaining the Prerogative of the Crown and rights of my People.

"I congratulate you on the completion of this noble edifice; p. 45. it is worthy of the memory of your predecessors and the station which you occupy in connection with the Bar of England.

"I sincerely hope that learning may long flourish and that virtue and talent may rise to eminence within these walls."

A chair was placed for the Prince on the left of Her Majesty.

He did not occupy it, but remained standing.

The above Address and its answer having been read, the Treasurer was knighted, and His Royal Highness Prince Albert was invited to become a Member of the Inn, to which he at once agreed, and the Admission Book being handed to Her Majesty and Prince Albert, they were graciously pleased to sign their names therein, as also did the following persons:—

The Lord Chancellor,† the Duke of Wellington,‡ the Marquis of Exeter,§ the Earl of Aberdeen, Lord Liverpool, the Earl of De-la-Warr [sic], the Earl of Jersey,†† the Earl of Hardwicke,‡ the Earl of Lincoln, Lord George Lennox, Sir James Graham, Colonel the Hon. — Grey, Capt. the Hon. Alexander N. Hood, Colonel Bouverie, and Captain Francis Seymour.

Prince Albert was subsequently made a Bencher, and has thus conferred additional honour on the Inn.

The ceremony being over in the Library, Her Majesty, accompanied by the above party, then proceeded to the Hall.

^{*} Sir James Robert George Graham, Bart., the Home Secretary.

Grace being said by the Chaplain, the assembly received the permission of the Queen to be seated. Her Majesty, occupying a Chair of State with a canopy, partook of the refreshment provided, appearing well pleased and contented.

On the right of the Queen sat Prince Albert; next to His Royal Highness, the Lord Chancellor, and then came the Duke of Wellington, and then the Earl of Aberdeen.

On the left of Her Majesty sat the Treasurer, Sir Francis Simpkinson, and then one of the Ladies in Waiting, next the Earl of Hardwicke, and others.

At the end of the banquet, which lasted about half an hour, Grace was again said; and then the Treasurer, having received permission from Her Majesty to propose a toast, gave the health of the Royal and Illustrious Queen, who had that day honoured them with Her presence. This was responded to with many cheers. When this had subsided, and it lasted for some minutes, the Treasurer, after stating that His Royal Highness had that day become a member of the Inn, begged, with the permission of Her Majesty, to propose the health of their new member, His Royal Highness Prince Albert. This also was received with loud cheering, and was rendered even more interesting by the manner in which the Queen joined in it. Holding a glass of port wine in her hand, she stood up all the time, and drank it off to the bottom. His Royal Highness, in a peculiarly distinct voice, returned thanks, and said he had received Her Majesty's commands to propose "Prosperity to the Honourable Society of Lincoln's Inn," which was drank.

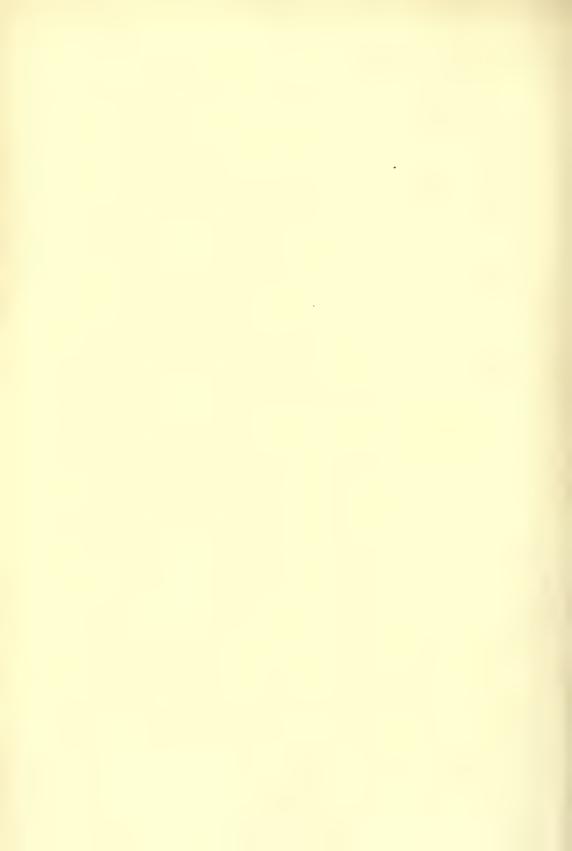

Soon after, the Queen, accompanied by the Ministers and Benchers, withdrew, amidst loud cheering. Her Majesty and her party retired into the Council Room, whence, after her carriage had been summoned, she came again into the Hall, and accompanied by the Treasurer, and Benchers, she proceeded amidst loud cheering to her carriage, and departed.

It is further to be noticed that Prince Albert, on withdrawing after the feast, put on a student's gown over his Field Marshal's uniform, and so wore it on returning from the Hall.

	LINCOLN'S	INN.

The Site of Lincoln's Knn.

By WILLIAM PALEY BAILDON, F.S.A.

The early history of the site of Lincoln's Inn, that is, prior to its occupation by the Honourable Society, has always puzzled the writers on London topography. The difficulty arises in reconciling these facts:—1. That the Society in 1422 (the date of the commencement of the Black Books) paid rent to the Bishop of Chichester; 2. that the premises have, since that date been known as "Lincoln's Inn," while the Society has, for two centuries and a half at least, used the arms of the Lacys, Earls of Lincoln.*

Did then the Bishop's house, or the Earl's house, or both, constitute the premises known as Lincoln's Inn, and were there in fact two houses or only one? The writers on the subject have taken differing views, but the generally accepted theory now-a-days is that adopted by Mr. Foss,† namely, that the north part formed the site of the Earl's house, while the Bishop's house adjoined this on the south, and extended to what is now New Square. The older authorities are very obscure, perhaps designedly; the statements of the three earliest are here printed.

The first edition of Stow's Survey, 1598, has the following account:—

"Neare unto this Cursitors' office be divers faire houses and large gardens, builded and made in a ground sometime belonging to one great house on the other side the street, there made by Ralph Nevel, Bishop of Chichester.

"On the west side of Newstreete, towards the north end thereof was (of old time) the church and house of the Preaching Friers; the which house I find that in the yeere of Christ 1221, the Fryers Preachers, 13 in number, came into England, and having to their Prior one named Gilbert de Fraxineto, in company of Peter de la Roch, Bishop of Winchester, came to Canterburie, where presenting themselves before the Archbishop Steven, hee commanded the said Prior to preach, whose sermon he liked so well, that ever after hee loved that Order. These Fryers came to London, and had their first house without the Wall of the City by Oldboorne, neere unto the old Temple.

* * * * *

"In the yeere 1276, Gregory Rokesley, Maior, and the Barons of London, granted and gave to Robert Kilwerby, Archbishop of Canterburie, two lanes or waies next the street of Baynards Castell, and the Tower of Mountfitchet, to be destroyed. On the which place the said Robert builded the late new church, with the rest of the stones that were left of the said Tower. And thus the Black Fryers left their church and house by Oldboorne, and departed to their new. This old Frier-house (juxta Holboorn, saith the Patent), was by K. Ed. the I, in the 16 of his raign, given to Henry Lacy, Earle of Lincolne. Next to this house of Fryers, was one other great House, sometime belonging to the Bishop of Chichester, whereof Mathew Paris writeth thus:

"Raph de nova villa or Nevill, Bishop of Chichester, and Chancellor of England, sometime builded a noble house, even from the ground, not farre from the New Temple and house of Converts, in the which place he deceased, in the yeere 1244."

"In this place after the decease of the said Bishop, and in place of the house of Blacke-Fryers before spoken of, Henry Lacy, Earle of Lincolne, Constable of Chester, and Custos of England, builded his Inne, and for the most part was lodged there: hee deceased in this house in the yeere 1310, and was buried in the new worke, (whereunto he had been a great benefactor) of Saint Paul's Church, betwixt our Lady Chappell and Saint Dunstane's Chappell. This Lincolne's Inne, sometime pertaining to the Bishops of Chichester, as part of the said great house, is now an Inne of Court, retaining the name of Lincolnes Inne, as afore, but now lately encreased with fayre buildings, and replenished with Gentlemen, studious in the Common Lawes," etc. etc.*

The next writer is Francis Thynne, Lancaster Herald, a careful antiquary, and a member of Lincoln's Inn†:-

"Lincoln's Inn, situated in New-street, now called Chancery Lane, corruptly for Chancellor's Lane, is composed of the ruins of the Black Friers house of Oldborn, and the house of Ralf Nevil, Bishop of Chichester and Chancellor of England to H. 3, in whose time he built that house. . . . Of this Bishop's house and of the Black Friers did Henry Lacy, the last Earl of Lincoln of that name, . . . erect a stately house, which, according to the order of most of the other noblemen's houses, was after his title of honor called Lincoln's Inn, where he made his most abode, and died in the year 1310, about the 3 or 4 year of E. 2, the pre-eminence thereof still remaining in the Bishoprick of Chichester. This house not many years after was made an Inn of Court."*

This paper is not dated. The preceding article is dated Easter, 33 [Elizabeth, 1591], and the one following July 1, 1600; both these are on the same subject.

In 1614, a new edition of Stow's Annales was edited by Edmond Howes. To this was added an Appendix, containing an account of the Inns of Court and Chancery, written by Sir George Buck, Knight, one of the Gentlemen of the King's Privy Chamber, and Master of his Majesty's Office of the Revels, 1615.

"The next Colledg or Inne of Court to these Temples is Lincolnes Inne, the auncient allye and friend of the Middle Temple. It is scituate in New-streete or Chancery Lane, and a part of it was of ould time the messuage or mansion house of a Gentleman called William de Haverhyll, Treasurer to King Henry the third, who was attaynted of Treason, and his house and landes confiscate to the King, who then gave this house to Raphe de Nova villa, Chauncellour of Englande, and Bishoppe of Chichester, and he built there a fayre house for him and his successoures, Bishoppes of Chichester, as Mathew Paris hath recorded. And it continued in the possession of the Bishoppes of Chichester untill the time of King Henry the Seaventh: when it was conveyed to Judge Suliard and to other Feoffees, and this Judge and his posteritie held the inheritance of it untill the raign of the late Queene Elizabeth of glorious memory, and then Sir Edward Suliard of Essex sould the estate of inheritance of this house, with the appurtenances, to the Gentlemenne, the Benchers of Lincolnes Inne, (as I am acertayned by that most worthy and learned Gentlemanne, Sir James Lea, Knight, late Lord Chief Justice of the Kinges Bench in Irelande, an auncient fellow of this honorable Colledge, and an excellent antiquarie). And notwithstanding that part of the inheritance of this house had first beene belonging to the sayde Haverhyll, and after to the Bishoppes of Chichester, yet the auncient Students and Professors in this house did not admitte the name of Haverhyll Inne, nor of Chichester Inne, nor of Suliards Inne, but of Lincolnes Inne, although never any Earle of Lincolne had any Estate of inheritance in this house, nor in the one halfe as it is, but I deny not but that Sir Henry Lacy, Earle of Lincolne, enioyed that part of it which was made out of the oulde monastery of the Blacke Friers given to him by Ki. Edward the first, . . . And it is likely also that this Earle of Lincoln gotte some part of the Bishop of Chichester's ground or housing towards the enlarging of his new house of Lincolnes Inne, which hee prepared and built in the Raigne of Kinge Edward the first and therein hee dyed, An. Dom. 1310. And not only that house, but also Chichester Inne and Haverhall Inne, and divers other messuages purchased by the Benchers of this Colledge and Fellowshippe, and layed into it, go now and have long since gone by the name of Lincolnes Inne.

"And as it seemes and is most probable, the Benchers of this Colledge tooke an estate of long time by lease, soon after the death of the Earle of Lincolne, who died in the Raigne of Kinge Edwarde the second, by which estate they held this house, until their purchase from Sir Edward Suliard lastly mentioned."*

Bishop Montague, who claimed the Inn for the See of Chichester in 1635, was equally vague and uncertain; for, having first asserted that the Inn was the house built by Bishop Neville, he goes on to state that "the Frier Preachers had first a house in New Streete , beinge that which the lawyers of Lincolne's Inne nowe hold." †

As the above extracts show, Stow and his successors, starting with the fact that the Earl of Lincoln did purchase and occupy the house of the Black Friars, go on to assume that Lincoln's Inn must be the site of this house. This assumption, though very natural, is, however, erroneous, for the Earl's house was not on the site of Lincoln's Inn, nor in Chancery Lane at all, but stood at the north-east corner of Shoe Lane.

In proving this statement it is necessary to go somewhat fully into the history of the Earl's house, in order to show that its site was not that of Lincoln's Inn.

The first document is the grant to Henry de Lacy, Earl of Lincoln, of the house of the Black Friars in Holborn, not by the King, as stated, but by the Friars themselves. The deed is dated March 3rd, 1286, and is embodied in the King's letters of inspeximus.

This is no doubt the place where, as Stow says, the Earl for the most part lodged, though there seems no reason to suppose that the house was in ruins.

There are preserved among the records of the Duchy of Lancaster several accounts relating to the Earl of Lincoln's London property, from which some very interesting details can be gathered.

The first of these, dated in 1297, 25 Edward I,* shows that the hall had round windows, which were glazed in that year, and required 65 feet of glass.

The next account, in 1305, 33 Edward I,† is more full. Eight shops in Holborn and other tenements were let at yearly rents; an inclosure was made in the great chapel; a "pentice" was made at the head of the hall for putting dishes and hangings on [pro pelvibus et tapetis imponendis]; an inclosure was made for an almonry [pro elemosinaria]; a new larder was built; and so on. Vines are mentioned, and other fruit trees.‡

There is no trace of this property ever having been known as "Lincoln's Inn." Prior to the Earl's death, and for long afterwards, it was called the "Manor of Holborn." This name first appears in a conveyance of some adjoining property to the Earl in 1309.

As will be seen hereafter, this trust for sale was not carried out. Lacy left an only daughter and heiress, Alesia or Alice, who was born about 1283. At the early age of eleven she married Thomas, Earl of Lancaster, son of Edmund Crouchback, and grandson of Henry III.

The Earl of Lancaster seems to have used the house in Holborn as his town residence, for in 1314, a deed was executed a Holebourne, en l'osteal le Comte de Lancaster, en suburbe § de Londres.

Lancaster was beheaded at Pontefract on March 22nd, 1322, having been attainted for the insurrection generally known as "the Earl of Lancaster's Rebellion," which ended so disastrously at the Battle of Boroughbridge. All his honours and estates were declared forfeit.

After Lancaster's death, his widow Alesia released all her estates to Edward II, including all her right in omnibus terris et tenementis in vico de Holburn in suburbio London', by a deed dated at York, June 7th, 1322. She is described as late wife of Thomas, Earl of Lancaster, and daughter and heir of Henry de Lacy, late Earl of Lincoln. The reason for this release is not very apparent, but the next two documents rather suggest that it was part of a scheme for enriching Hugh le Despenser, the royal favourite.

On February 5th, 1325, Hugh le Despenser obtained the King's pardon for having acquired without license 134 knight's fees in Wiltshire, Somerset, Dorset, Berkshire, Gloucestershire, Devon, Hampshire and Oxfordshire, from Alesia, widow of Thomas, Earl of Lancaster, who held them in chief;* while on the following day a similar pardon was granted relating to various manors and other property in Leicestershire, Nottinghamshire, Derbyshire, Shropshire, Wiltshire and Staffordshire.†

On the 10th of February, 1325, the King granted a license to Ebulo Lestraunge and Alesia his wife, "our dear cousin," to enfeoff Hugh le Despenser and his heirs in various properties, including—ac de omnibus terris et tenementis que Henricus de Lasey, pater predicte Alesie, habuit in vico de Holebourn in suburbio London'. A further license enabled Despenser to re-grant the same to Ebulo and Alesia for the life of the latter.†

The date of Alesia's marriage to Ebulo or Ebulus[†] Lestrange is not known, but the last quoted document shows that it was prior to February 10th, 1325§; he was a younger son of John, 1st Lord Strange of Knockyn.

In 1326 the two Despencers were executed, and their property forfeited. The manor of Holborn thus became Crown property, subject to the life estate of Alesia Lestrange.

In 1331 Alesia and her husband obtained from Edward III a grant of the reversion of the Holborn property to the heirs of Ebulo.

The charter recites that it was made in consideration of his good service and also of the remise and quit-claim which he and Alesia his wife made for themselves and the heirs of Alesia to the King and his heirs of all their claim in the property which the King holds of Alesia's inheritance, and which she gave to Edward II and to Hugh le Despencer senior and junior, while she was sole, and which by the forfeiture of the Despencers came to the King's hands; and grants (i.a.) Ebulo died without issue on September 10th, 1335. The following passage is from the inquisition held after his death:—

"Ebulus Lestraunge tenuit die quo obiit de domino Rege in capite in dominico suo ut de feodo unum mesuagium cum pertinencüs in Holebourn in suburbio London', quod quondam fuit Henrici de Laci quondam Comitis Lincoln' sine aliquo servicio inde faciendo annuatim; Et dicunt quod dictum mesuagium valet per annum ultra reprisam sexaginta solidos per annum in omnibus exitibus. Dicunt eciam quod dominus Rex qui nunc est dedit predictum mesuagium predicto Ebuloni et Alesie uxori sue et heredibus de corporibus eorundum exeuntibus, et si obierint sine herede de corporibus eorum exeuntibus, dictum mesuagium remaneret rectis heredibus dicti Ebulonis inperpetuum."

Dated the Wednesday before SS. Simon and Jude, [October 28th,] 9 Edward III, 1335.*

The Roger Lestrange here mentioned as Ebulo's heir was his nephew, son of his brother John, and afterwards 4th Baron. He died July 29th, 1349; the manor of Holborn is not mentioned in his inquisition.†

Alesia married for the third time, one Hugh de Frene, early in 1336. She herself died on October 2nd, 1348, without leaving issue by any of her three husbands. The inquisition taken after her death makes no mention of the manor of Holborn, as she had only a life interest in it. Roger Lestraunge of Knockyn is found to be then the next heir of Ebulo, and aged 30 years and more.‡

The Roger mentioned in Alesia's inquisition was the son of the former Roger, and consequently great-nephew to Ebulo; he succeeded as 5th Baron Strange in 1349. He seems to have held the Holborn property until his death in 1382. The following extract is taken from his inquisition :-

"Rogerus Lestraunge de Knokyn chivaler tenuit in dominico suo ut de feodo die quo obiit unum magnum tenementum, cum gardino et xvj shopas dicto tenemento annexis, cum suis pertinenciis, in parochia Sancti Andree in Holbourne in suburbio London', que ad vij li. iiij s. extenditur per annum ultra reprisas quando locatur; Et unum aliud tenementum cum pertinenciis, in quo Johannes Ketslei (?) modo inhabitat in eadem parochia, quod ad vj li. v s. iiij d. extenditur per annum ultra reprisas quando locatur; Et eciam unum aliud tenementum cum pertinenciis in quo Willelmo Reuit (?)

John Lestraunge was found to be son and heir, aged 30.

Roger died 23rd August.*

On July 8th, 9 Richard II, 1385, John Lestrange, 6th Baron Strange of Knokyn, granted manerium meum de Holburne in suburbe Londonie to Richard [Fitz Alan], Earl of Arundel and Surrey, Alina Lestrange, and Ebulo Lestrange, clerk (the mother and brother respectively of the grantor), for their lives, with remainder to the said Alina.†

The property was resettled on John and Maude his wife, and the heirs of their bodies, by a deed not upon record, but referred to in the inquisition taken after John's death on August 13th,

1397 :--

John son of Roger Lestraunge of Knokyn was seised on the day that he died "de et in Manerio de Holbourne in suburbio Civitatis predicte [London] conjunctim cum Matilda uxore sua ex dono et feoffamento domini Ebulonis Lestraunge, persone ecclesie de Grefford, et Ricardo Edenenet persone ecclesie de Lannemenagh, videlicet ipsi Johanni et Matilde et heredibus de corporibus suis exeuntibus; Et dicunt quod predictum manerium valet quiete per annum ultra omnia onera et reprisas xx marcas, et tenetur de dicto domino Rege in liberum burgagium, sicut et tota Civitas predicta, et dicunt quod predictus Johannes filius Rogeri Lestraunge obiit die Sabbati proxima post festum Sancti Jacobi Apostoli ultimum preteritum . . . Richard, 7th Lord Strange of Knockyn, died on August 9th, 1449. I have not found any record of his dealings with the Manor of Holborn, nor is it mentioned in his inquisition. He was succeeded by his son John.

Sometime in 1473 or 1474 the manor was seized by the Crown on the ground that the settlement on John, the 6th Baron, and Maude, his wife (see above), had been made without the royal license. According to the strict letter of the feudal law, no tenant could alienate his land without the permission of his lord. To what extent this rule was enforced by the mesne lords, it is impossible to say; * but the tenants in capite certainly had to obey it, on pain of forfeiture. A considerable number of the pardons entered on the Pardon Rolls and Patent Rolls are for alienating without license. In this case an inquiry was held at the Guildhall, on April 3rd, 13 Edward IV, 1473. The finding of the Jury is as follows:--

"De manerio de Holbourne cum pertinenciis in suburbio Civitatis predicte, de quo Johannes nunc Dominus Straunge modo seisitus extitit, quidam Ebulo Straunge,† Rector Ecclesie de Grefford, et Ricardus Edenenet, Rector Ecclesie de Lannemenagh, quondam fuerunt seisiti in dominico suo ut de feodo, et sic inde seisiti predictum manerium cum pertinenciis tenuerunt de domino Rege in capite, set per que servicia penitus ignorant; et sic inde seisiti predictum manerium cum suis pertinenciis, licencia regia inde prius non optenta, dederunt et concesserunt cuidam Johanni Domino Straunge, filio Rogeri Straunge, et Matildis uxori ejus, iam defuncte : Habendum et Tenendum eis et heredibus suis de corporibus suis exeuntibus; virtute cujus doni iidem Johannes et Matilda fuerunt inde seisiti in dominico suo ut de feodo, juxta formam doni predicti; et quod idem manerium cum pertinenciis valet per annum in omnibus exitibus suis ultra reprisas viginti marcas."t

The manor was accordingly seized, more than three quarters of a century after the forfeiture was incurred. Verily Nullum tempus occurrit Regi!

On January 23rd, 1474. Edward IV granted the manor of Holeborne in the suburbs of London, which had been taken into the King's hands by virtue of the above inquisition of April 3rd, 1473, to Thomas Stanley, Lord de Stanley, Steward of the Household, William Grene, clerk, Morgan Kydwelly and Richard Morys, for their good services; To hold to them from the said April 3rd, as long as the said manor should remain in the King's hands, without paying any rent or rendering any account. Lord Stanley was the second baron, and was created Earl of Derby in 1485.

On May 16th, 14 Edward IV, 1474, John Broughton, Richard Godfrey, John Asshfeld and John Gyrton, came before the King in his Chancery at Westminster, and complained that the Manor of Holebourne had been seized into the King's hands, and that they had been put out of possession thereof unjustly; for, said they, long before the taking of the said inquisition, and before the said John, Lord Straunge, had any interest in the said Manor, one William Toumies [?] was seised thereof in his demesne as of fee, and held it of the King in free burgage, as all the City of London is held; and being so seised, he enfeoffed the said John Broughton and the others, to hold to them and their heirs for ever; and they remained seised thereof until John, now Lord Straunge, disseised them While they were thus disseised, the Manor was taken into the King's hands as aforesaid. They prayed that possession might be restored to them.

On November 16th, 14 Edward IV, 1474, the four claimants put in their plea again, as before. They say further that the King, by his Letters Patent, dated January 23rd, 13 Edward IV, 1474, has granted the said Manor to Thomas Stanley, Lord de Stanley [and others], and ask that they may be summoned to show cause why the said Letters Patent should not be annulled.*

I have not found any further proceedings in this matter, nor anything to throw light on the petitioners' claim. On May 10th, 1477, the King exemplified, at the instance of John Broughton, Esq., by a charter of Inspeximus, the confirmation by Edward III of his grant to Ebulo Lestraunge, deceased, and Alesia, then his wife [ante, p. 270], the inquisition on Ebulus Lestraunge [ante, p. 271], the inquisition on Roger Lestraunge [ante, p. 271], the inquisition on John Lestraunge [ante, p. 272], and the inquisition of 13 Edward IV [ante, p. 273].†

Broughton's claim, whatever it may have been, was clearly unsuccessful, for John, Lord Strange, was in possession at the time of his death in 1479, as appears by the finding of the jury at his inquisition, held on October 26th, 1480:-

"Qui dicunt quod Ebulus Straunge, Rector ecclesie de Grefford, et Ricardus Edenenet, Rector ecclesie de Lannemenach, fuerunt seisiti in dominico suo ut de feodo de Manerio de Holburn cum pertinenciis; Et quod sic inde seisiti, Manerium illud cum pertinenciis dederunt Johanni domino de Straunge, filio Rogeri Straunge et Matilde uxoris ejus ac heredibus ipsius Johannis de corpore suo exeuntibus, virtute cujus doni prefatus Johannes fuit seisitus de manerio predicto . . cum pertinenciis in dominico suo ut de feodo tailliato, per formam doni predicti, et de tali statu inde seisitus obiit. Joan Lestrange, Baroness Strange of Knockyn in her own right, was, as appears above, already married in or before 1480. Her husband, Sir George Stanley, was the eldest son of Thomas Stanley, 1st Earl of Derby, who had the grant of the manor of Holborn in 1474 [ante, p. 273].

Sir George died in the lifetime of his father, and so did not succeed to the Earldom.

Joan died on October 26th, 1514, leaving her son and heir Thomas, 2nd Earl of Derby. There is no return of her London or Middlesex property.†

Thomas, the 2nd Earl, died May 23rd, 1521. His inquisition gives much information as to the dealings with the Holborn estate, from which the following is extracted:

Long before the death of Thomas, Earl of Derby, Joan Stanley, Lady Lestrange, his mother, was seised of the manor of Holbourne, and of 12 messuages, 40 gardens, and 1 acre of land in Holbourne and Fleet Street.

So seised, she, by charter dated May 26th, 21 Henry VII, 1506, granted all the said premises in London to Robert Brudnell, William Grevyll, William Fayrefax, Serjeant at Law, Richard Sutton, Thomas Pygott, John Cheyne, Richard Croke, Anthony Fitzherbert, Thomas Stanley and George Herberne, and their heirs, to the uses specified in certain indentures of even date, and made between the said Lady

Lestrange of the one part, and John Pynner and Parme his wife, of the other part.

The said Robert Brudnell and the other feoffees, being so seised, by a charter dated May 27th, 21 Henry VII, 1506, at the instance of the said Lady Lestrange, granted to the said John Pynner and Parme his wife, an annuity of 10 marks issuing out of the said premises, for the term of 20 years from Lady Day then last past.

Afterwards the said Lady Lestrange, by charter dated October 20th, 2 Henry VIII, 1510, granted to Thomas Stanley, one of the sons of Peter Stanley, Esq., and Margery his wife, formerly of Ewlowe in the County of Flint, all the said manor of Holborn and other the premises for life.

By bill indented, dated November 6th, 8 Henry VIII, 1516, made between the said Earl of the one part and the said Thomas Stanley of the other part, it was agreed that the said Thomas Stanley should release to the Earl all his interest in the said manor of Holborn for certain considerations therein set forth.

All the said premises are held of the King in free burgage, and are worth £ 10 clear, yearly.

The Earl died May 23rd last; Edward Stanley is his son and next heir, and was then aged 12 years and 14 days.*

Edward Stanley, 3rd Earl of Derby, died October 24th, 1572. His inquisition does not mention the Holborn property.‡ Nor is it referred to in the inquisition of his successor, Henry, 4th Earl, who died September 25th, 1593.§

On the death of his successor, Ferdinando, 5th Earl, who died April 16th, 1594, we get some further particulars.

Inquisition taken at the Guildhall, June 13th, 37 Elizabeth, 1595, after the death of Ferdinando, late Earl of Derby. Long before the death of the said late Earl, Edward late Earl, his grandfather, had issue Henry, his son and heir, (father of Ferdinando), Thomas and Edward. Henry, afterwards Earl of Derby, had issue Edward, his eldest son, (who died March 5th [1562], at Holborne in the suburbs of London, without heir male of his body), Ferdinando (late Earl), his second son, William (now Earl), the third son, and Francis, the fourth son. The said Edward late Earl, long before the death of Ferdinando, was seised in his demesne as of fee of and in the manor of Holborne with the appurtenances in the suburbs of London and within the County of the City, and of 100 houses, 40 gardens, and an acre of land in Holburne and Shoe Lane; and being so seised, he, by his charter, dated at Holborne, March 20th, 12 Elizabeth, [1570], settled the same on himself for life, without impeachment of waste, with remainder to Henry then Lord Straunge for 99 years (if he should so long live), with remainder to his first and other sons successively in tail male, with remainder to Thomas Stanley, second son of Edward late Earl of Derby, for life, with like remainders to his sons, with remainder to the said Edward Stanley, third son of Edward late Earl of Derby, for life, with like remainders to his sons, with remainder to the heirs male of the body of the said Edward late Earl, with remainder to the heirs male of the body of George, Lord Straunge, grandfather of the said Edward late Earl, with remainder to the heirs of the body of the said Edward late Earl, with remainder to his right heirs for ever.

The said Edward late Earl died on October 24th, 14 Elizabeth, [1572], at Holborne aforesaid. The said Henry late Earl died September 25th, 35 Elizabeth, [1593], at Holeborne aforesaid. Ferdinando late Earl died April 16th, 36 Elizabeth, [1594], at Holeborne aforesaid, without heir male of his body; whereupon William now Earl of Derby entered upon the said premises. The said manor and premises are held of the Queen in free burgage, and are worth £10 yearly clear. The Ladies Anne, Frances, and Elizabeth are his daughters and next heirs. His widow, Alice, is still living at Holeborne.*

In 1598, the capital messuage of the Manor of Holborn was no longer occupied by its owners. Stow records that "in this Shooe Lane, on the lefte hand, is one old house called Oldborne Hall; it is now letten out into divers tenementes."† It is somewhat remarkable that none of Stow's subsequent editors were able to add anything to this very meagre note.

The hall was doubtless in bad condition, and, as we shall see, it seems to have been rebuilt soon afterwards. Apparently the grounds were also built over about the same time. The following petition, which is without date, but is prior to May 24th, 1612, refers to these building operations:—

"To the right Hoble the Earle of Salisburye, Lo.: Tresorer of England.

"The humble petition of Tho: Penkithman of Warrington in Lancashire.

" Humbly sheweth

"That yo Peticioner havinge bestowed much money in buildinge certen houses in Shoe Lane in London upon wast ground of the right Hoble the now Earle of Darbye's predecesso;

"And after his time expired, aboute 14 yeares last past, yor Orator tooke a lease of the said Earle of Darbye of the said houses for 21 yeares under certen rent, we was paid to the said Earle by the space of 5 yeares.

"But one Shute, pretendinge to have a lease (formerlye granted) of the premisses, was possessed thereof before yor Lo: Orator tooke his lease of the said Earle: by means whereof yor Orator never enjoyed them accordinge to his Loppes grant," etc., etc.*

In Newcourt's Map of London, 1658, the site appears to be almost all built over, while in Ogilby and Morgan's map of 1677, the whole of the ground (except a portion taken to enlarge the burial ground of S. Andrew's, Holborn) is shown to be covered with buildings, separated only by narrow courts and alleys. One of these was called "Eagle and Child Alley," an obvious reminiscence of the Stanley family, their crest being "on a chapeau gules, turned up ermine, an eagle or, preying on an infant in its cradle, proper, swaddled gules."

Wilkinson, in his Londiniana, pp. 180, 181, gives two plates of Holborn Hall; one showing the front, and a fine stucco ceiling, dated 1617; the other a richly carved mantelpiece in the principal apartment. Some description of the house and site are added. The place was then, 1834, in the occupation of Messrs.

Pontifex.

This newer house was standing in 1855, according to Newton's London in the Olden Time. He says, "a part of a mansion is yet standing, and bears marks of some antiquity; it is presumed, however, that this is not the original Oldborne Hall ^{*} State Papers, Domestic, James I, vol. 69, No. 38. Prior to May 24, 1612.

mentioned by Stow, as it is evidently an erection of the time of Iames I."*

Such then is the descent of the Earl of Lincoln's house. It is, I think, abundantly clear from the foregoing evidence that it was on a site perfectly distinct from that of Lincoln's Inn.†

Let us now examine the history of the Bishop of Chichester's house. We have already seen what the three earliest authorities have to say about it [ante, p. 263, et seq.]; Bishop Montague's account in 1635 will be found in the Black Books.‡

The site formed part of the estate of one John Herlycun or Herlizun, which was forfeited to the Crown for some cause that does not appear. Part of this was granted to Ralph Neville, Bishop of Chichester, in 1226, but only during the King's pleasure.

The King grants to the Bishop of Chichester the garden with appurtenances which was John Herlycun's, in the new street before the New Temple [in novo vico ante Novum Templum] to keep during the King's pleasure. Dated May 2,

10 Henry III, [1226].§

This was followed in July, 1227, by a grant in fee of the same or some other portion of Herlizon's property:-

"Henricus Rex, etc., Salutem. Noveritis nos dedisse concesse et hac carta nostra confirmasse venerabili patri Radulpho Cycestr' Episcopo, Cancellario nostro, placiam illam cum gardino et pertinenciis suis que fuit Johannis Herlizun, qui terras suas forisfecit, in vico illo qui vocatur Newestrete, exopposito terre ejusdem Episcopi in eodem vico, que quidem placia cum gardino et pertinenciis suis escaeta nostra est per libertatem Civitatis Lond', secundum quam omnes terre eorum qui terras forisfaciunt escaete nostre sunt de quocunque teneant, sic recognitum fuit coram nobis in curia nostra apud Turrim London' ad ultima placita eiusdem Civitatis de corona, Habendam et tenendam eidem Episcopo, et quibuscumque eam dare assignare vel legare voluerit, in feudo et hereditate, bene et in pace, libere quiete integre et pacifice, faciendo inde dominis feodi illius debitum eis inde servicium. [†] The Bishop of Lincoln had a residence in or near Holborn, which has sometimes been confused with Lincoln's Inn; e.g., the index to Strype's Stow, ed 1720, has "Lincoln's Inn, formerly belonging to the Bishops of that place." It adjoined the Old Temple, and was built (according to Stow) about 1147. Stow calls it "the Bishop of Lincolne's Inne." "It hath of late yeeres belonged to the Earles of Southampton, and therefore called Southampton House." Stow's Survey, ed. 1618, p. 824.

Hiis testibus [etc.]. Datum per manum nostram apud Westm' xix die Julii, anno regno nostro xj, [1227]."*

The original charter is now in the possession of the Society, and was no doubt handed over when the freehold was purchased in 1580. A facsimile of it forms the frontispiece to this volume.

It was probably shortly after the date of this charter that the Bishop commenced to build his palace. Bishop Reade says of him—"Hic acquisivit Episcopatui terras sive gardinum juxta Vetus Templum Londini, in vico vocato 'Chancelleres Lane,' et ibidem sumptuose edificavit."† A few fragments, apparently of a window, found in digging the foundations for the westward extension of the chapel in 1877, and now erected in the undercroft, show that the building was in the early English style of architecture.‡

In 1235 Henry granted the remainder of Herlizun's estate to the House of Converts.

The King grants to the House which he caused to be founded in the street called Newestrete between the Old Temple and the New, for the sustentation of the Converts from Judaism to the Catholic faith, "domos et terras quas fuerunt Johannis Herlicun in London' et sunt in manu Regis tamquam escaeta Regis, excepto gardino quod fuit eiusdem Johannis in vico predicto de Newestrete, et quod dominus Rex prius per cartam suam concessit R. Cicestr' Episcopo, Cancellario suo."§

Bishop Neville died in his new palace in 1244, as Matthew

Paris records:—

"Sub eisdem quoque diebus venerabilis pater Episcopus Cicestrensis, Radulphus scilicet de Novilla, Angliæ Cancellarius, vir per omnia laudabilis, et immota columpna fidelitatis in regni et regis negotiis, Londiniis in nobili palatio suo quod a fundamentis non procul a Novo Templo construxerat, Kal. Febr. vitam temporalem terminavit, perpetuam adepturus."

[§] Close Roll, 19 Henry III, m. 13. || Rolls Series, ii, p. 480.

Neville was succeeded by Richard de Wyche, 1244-1253, afterwards canonised, and known as S. Richard of Chichester, who died April 3rd, 1253.

He no doubt resided in the palace in Chancery Lane, though the statement to that effect in 1466, must be traditional only.* The chapel was subsequently dedicated to him and his image was placed in it.†

It is not to be expected that episcopal property can be traced with the same minuteness as a lay fee; there are no Inquisitions post mortem, and charters, grants to uses, or other acts inter vivos are alike wanting under the "dead hand." Accordingly, the references to the Bishops' house are few and far between. Had the Registers of the early Bishops of Chichester been preserved, many of the gaps would doubtless have been reduced; as it is, I have found no evidence between 1244 and 1340.

Robert de Stratford was appointed Bishop of Chichester in 1337, being then Chancellor. He resigned the Great Seal in July 1338, but was reappointed June 20th, 1340. He was not sworn in until July 12th, when the following memorandum of the transaction was recorded on the Close Roll:-

"Qui quidem Episcopus, prestito Sacramento, prout moris est, de Officio Cancellarii fideliter faciendo, idem Sigillum manibus suis propriis a predicto Johanne de Sancto Paulo § recepit, et ad illud Hospitium in vico qui vocatur Chaunceler-lane, deportari, et in Crastino, in camera sua, immediate post Prandium, in Hospitio suo predicto, aperiri, et ibidem Literas Patentes et Brevia de cursu et alia, inde consignari fecit."

The Close Roll of 1375 shows the Bishops' House still in Chancery Lane.

There is nothing here to suggest that the Bishop (William Reade) was not in personal occupation of the Hospitium, unless it be the reference to the apprenticii de Curia Domini Regis. How far, if at all, the apprentices "de Curia" differed from those "de Banco" and "ad legem", is open to question, but there can be no reasonable doubt that the apprenticii de Curia were connected with some or one of the Inns of Court or Chancery.

The fact that they are mentioned in connection with the Clerks of the Chancery seems to indicate that they had a local habitation. They may perhaps have been members of Clifford's Inn, which had been let apprenticies de Banco as early as 1344.†

The earliest Register now remaining at Chichester is that of Bishop Robert Reade or Rede, who occupied the See from 1396 to 1415. A careful search has been made in this and several subsequent Registers for all statements throwing light on the episcopal residence in London. The information has been supplied mainly from the datum clauses of deeds and letters, and in a few instances from notes of institutions to benefices.

The various items are as follows:-

The like form also occurs in 1402, October 18th, 19th and 27th, and November 2nd, [ibid., fo. 98.]; 1404-5, February 20th, [fo. 13d.]; in 1406, November 18th, [fo. 23]; and in 1409-10, February 14th, [fo. 56]. 1410-1, March 3rd, we find the form in Hospicio suo London', [ibid., fo. 144], and the same words are used in documents dated 1411, November 24th and 26th, [fo. 148d.]; December 9th, [fo. 149]; and in 1412-3, March 22nd, [fo. 153d.].

There can be no doubt that the Hospicium mentioned in these entries is the house built by Bishop Neville, now known as Lincoln's Inn; and as the Society of Lincoln's Inn was certainly in occupation of it in 1422, it may be assumed that they came to it in or shortly before that year.

After the occupation of the episcopal residence by the Society of Lincoln's Inn, the Bishops of Chichester seem to have used various houses in London. At least six are mentioned. I. A house in the parish of S. Mary Magdalene, Old Fish Street; 2. A house in the parish of S. Mary Mounthaw; 3. The Bishop of Carlisle's house in the Strand; 4. A house in S. James's Hospital; 5. A house in Tothill Street, Westminster; and 6. A house in the parish of S. Andrew's, near Paul's Wharf.

1439, November 19th; Datum in Hospicio residencie domini Cicestrensis Episcopi in parochia Sancte Marie Magdalene London. [Register Praty, 1438 to 1445, fo. 11d.]. On November 23rd of the same year, the parish is specified to be "in Oldfisshstrete, London." [fo. 12d.].

1444, July 7th; in Hospicio residencie suo pro tempore in parochia Beate Marie de Mounthaut, Civitate London'. [fo. 36d.]. The like form occurs again on October 20th following [fo. 38].

There is a gap in the Registers from 1445 to 1478.

1478, October 15th; in manerio domini Karliolensis Episcopi London' prope Westmonasterium. [Register Story,* 1478 to 1503, fo. 39d.].

1480, May 12th; in domo vulgariter nuncupata the Bysshop of Carlelles place apud le Stronde. This form also occurs on December 14th, 1480, November 18th and 21st, 1481, and January 31st, 1484. [Book E, fos. 107d., 108.]

1480, December 9th; in domo nostre solite residencie in surburbiis Civitatis London' situate. [Register Story, fo. 55.]

^{*} Edward Story had been Bishop of Carlisle before his translation to Chichester. He occupied the latter See from March 27th, 1478, up to his death, January 29th, 1502-3.

The next note seems to show that the "accustomed residence" and the Bishop of Carlisle's house were one and the same.

1481, July 4th; in domo solite residencie Reverendi Patris Edwardi Cicestrensis Episopi in suburbiis Civitatis London' juxta Westmonasterium, vulgariter nuncupata Hospicium Episcopi Karliolensis [fo. 19d.] Slight variations of these forms occur also in 1485 and 1486 [fos. 3, 5d.]

1508, January 5th; in domo habitacionis Reverendi in Christo Patris et Domini Domini Roberti permissione Divina Cicestrensis Episcopi in Totehill Strete juxta Westmonasterium [Register Sherborne, fo. 1].

1553, December 2nd; in edibus solite habitacionis nostre infra parochiam Sancti Andree prope Paules Wharfe London'. [Register

Sampson, fo. 91 d.].

These various references seem to me most effectually to dispose of the statement made by nearly all writers on the subject, to the effect that the Bishops reserved lodgings for themselves at Lincoln's Inn. The claim was made by Bishop Montague in 1635, [Black Books, iii, 334, 337], but he produced no evidence, and the right was not admitted by the Society. There is certainly no trace of such a reservation in the Black Books, nor in the lease from Bishop Sherborne to William Suliard in 1535.

The original of this lease is preserved among the Society's muniments. The seals of the Bishop and of the Dean and Chapter still remain. There is a written confirmation by the latter body. The matter is thus recorded in the Chapter Act book :--

"xx° Decembris, Anno Domini Millesimo Quingentesimo xxxv¹°, Decanus et Capitulum confirmarunt suo sigillo communi indenturam locacionis firme magni messuagii vocati Lyncolns Inne Magistro Willelmo Sulyard armigero pro termino nonaginta novem annorum, reddendo annuatim decem marcas Episcopo Cicestrensi et successoribus suis in festo Michaelis annuatim."*

Bishop Sampson, who succeeded Bishop Sherborne, within a month of his consecration conveyed the reversion in Lincoln's Inn to William and Eustace Suliard. The deed is as follows:—

is as follows:--

"Sexto die mensis Julii, anno domino millesimo quingentesimo xxxvj^{to}, Decanus et Capitulum confirmarunt suo sigillo communi litteras Reverendissimi Patris Ricardi Episcopi Cicestrensis ex

On the top of the opposite page, that is, fo. 79, is written the cancelled grant to Henry VIII, while the grant to the Suliards commences below this, about the middle of the page. The letter "a" is written in the margin at the beginning of the entry of the confirmation and at the beginning of the grant to the Suliards.

The cancelled grant to Henry VIII is as follows:-

The subsequent sale of the freehold by Edward Suliard to the Society of Lincoln's Inn in 1580, appears in the Black Books.

I have now traced the devolution of the Earl of Lincoln's house from 1286 to the reign of James I, and that of the Bishops of Chichester from 1226 to the time of its acquisition by the Society in 1580. The two descents, if I may use the term, are perfectly distinct, and there can be no doubt that the two properties were separate, and on different sites.

Having established the Society in the House of the Bishops of Chichester, it still remains for me to explain, if possible, why the Society called itself "Lincoln's Inn," and used the arms of the Earl of Lincoln. There seems to be no direct evidence bearing upon the subject. I can put forward a theory, but it is nothing more.

Before doing so, however, it will be necessary to consider the early history of Thavy's Inn and Furnival's Inn, the two Inns of Chancery attached to Lincoln's Inn.

Thavy's Inn was the resort of one of the earliest of the law societies of which we have any documentary evidence.* In 1348, one John Tavy, armourer,† makes the following devise in his will:—

"Item lego omnia tenementa mea cum omnibus suis pertinenciis que habeo in parte australi in parochia Sancti Andree, preter illam shopam quam legavi Isabelle filie mee, ut predictum est, Alicie uxori mee ad totum terminum vite sue, et quod post decessum predicte Alicie totum illud hospicium in [quo] apprenticii habitare solebant per executores meos, si superstites fuerint, una [cum] executoribus predicte Alicie, vendatur," etc. Dated "die. Jovis proxima ante festum Sancti Gregorii Pape, A.D. 1348."

All writers from Coke downwards have inserted the words legis or ad legem § after the word apprenticii; these words are not in the enrolled copy. Still there seems no reason to doubt that the apprentices who were wont to inhabit Thavy's house were a society of lawyers and law students of some sort.

Nothing further seems to be known as to the ownership of Thavy's Inn for two centuries. By an Indenture dated November 24th, 2 Edward VI, 1548, and made between Roger Pateshale of Myntye in the county of Gloucester, gentleman, of the one part, and Gregory Nicholas, Citizen and Mercer of London, of the other part, in consideration of £100, Pateshale bargained and sold to Nicholas, his heirs and assigns for ever "All that Capytall or greate mesuage wyth th'appurtenaunces, sett, lying, and beyng in the parisshe of Saynt Andrewe in Holborne, in the Suburbes of London, comonly callyd Davye's Inne."

In 1550 Nicholas sold the freehold to the Society of Lincoln's Inn.† Some title deeds appear to have been handed over on that occasion, but Pateshale's conveyance is the only one that can now be found. In 1581 the Society ordered that all deeds and evidences of Lincoln's Inn, Furnival's Inn, Thavy's Inn, etc., should be copied into a Register Book;‡ and in the following year a payment of £4 was made to the Chief Butler for so doing.§ This book is unfortunately also missing.

Of Furnival's Inn, Dugdale gives the following account:—
"This, being long ago an house of the Lord Furnivall's, had thereupon the name of Furnivall's Inne; and by some of them was antiently demised to the Students of the Law: for in 9 H. 4 it appears by their Steward's Accompts that they resided in it."

I have not been able to identify this property earlier than 1383. William de Furnival, fourth Lord Furnival, died in that year, and the following is a translation of the return made after his death.

Inquisition taken before John Norhampton, Mayor of the City of London, and the King's Escheator there, May 6th, 6 Richard II, [1383]. The jurors say on their oath that William de Furnyvall did not die seised of any lands or tenements in the City of London nor in the suburbs thereof, but they say that in his lifetime he was seised of two messuages and 13 shops with appurtenances in the street called Holbourne in the suburbs of the said City, lying between the tenement of Jordan de Barton on the east and that of John de Tonyngton on the west, and which formerly belonged to Roger atte Bogh; which William de Furnyvall in his lifetime enfeoffed William Savage, parson of the church of Handesworth, and John Redeser, chaplain, of the said messuages and shops, to have and to hold to the said William Savage and John Redeser, their heirs and assigns for ever; and they are now seised thereof accordingly. said messuages and shops are worth 100s. yearly, and are William de Furnyvall died on April 12th last. Joan, wife of Thomas de Nevyll, is his daughter and heir, aged 14 years and 7 months.*

This property is not mentioned in the Inquisitions post mortem of Thomas, second Lord Furnival, or of Thomas, third Baron (father and brother of the above-named William); and the wording of the above Inquisition suggests that William, the 4th Baron, had purchased it from Roger atte Bogh.

Lord Furnival's wife, Thomasia or Thomasina, daughter of Thomas de Dagworth, survived her husband. It does not appear that she claimed any rights of dower in the Holborn property.†

On June 22nd, 1383, an order was issued to the Escheator of Yorkshire to deliver up to Joan, daughter and heir of William de Furnival, chivaler, deceased, and wife of Thomas de Neville, the other lands and tenements which had belonged to her father, in his own right, she having proved her age. ‡

Thomas de Neville, Joan's husband, was the son of John, Lord Neville of Raby, and brother of Ralph, first Earl of Westmoreland. He was summoned to Parliament, jure uxoris, as Lord Furnival. Joan, Baroness Furnival in her own right, died on Thursday in the Feast of S. Mathias the Apostle, otherwise described as the Thursday in the first week of Lent, 19 Richard II, leaving an only daughter Maude, born about 1392.§

It appears from this that the suggestion made to the Benchers of Lincoln's Inn in 1808 [ante, p. 112], namely, that Furnival's Inn was brought to this Lord Furnival by his wife, is not correct. About Roger atte Bogh, to whom the two messuages and the thirteen shops had previously belonged, I cannot supply any further information. There is no Inquisition after his death, and his name does not appear in the calendar of Feet of Fines for London and Middlesex.

Maude's age can be supplied from other documents; she was aged 17 in August, 1409, being then the wife of John Talbot.†

Maude, Baroness Furnival in her own right, married John Talbot, 2nd son of Richard, Lord Talbot. He was summoned to Parliament jure uxoris as Lord Furnival.

Maude died before 1433.‡ It does not appear that any Inquisition was taken after her death. Her husband was created Earl of Shrewsbury in 1442, and Earl of Waterford in 1446. He died in 1453, when the following return was made:—

Inquisition taken at the Guildhall, before John Norman, Mayor and Escheator of London, November 8th, 32 Henry VI, [1453]. The jurors say on their oath that John [Talbot], late Earl of Shrewsbury, on the day of his death held for life by the law of England after the death of Maude, his late wife, a hospicium, called "Fournyvalle's Inne," and two tenements, with the appurtenances, situate in the parish of S. last. John, the now Earl, is his son and heir, aged 40 years.*

John Talbot, 2nd Earl of Shrewsbury, died in 1460, seised of Furnival's Inn, as is shown by the following abstract:—

Inquisition taken at the Guildhall before William Hulyn, Mayor, September 26th, 39 Henry VI, [1460]. The jurors say that John, late Earl of Shrewsbury, held in his demesne as of fee, of the King in fee burgage (as all the City of London is), a messuage with the appurtenances, called "Furnyvalesyn," situate in the parish of S. Andrew in Holborn, which messuage with the appurtenances is worth yearly £4 beyond reprises. He died July 10th last. John is his son and heir, aged 12 years at his father's death.†

John, 3rd Earl of Shrewsbury, died in 1474, leaving a son George, then aged 5 years, who succeeded as 4th Earl. There is no Inquisition as to his London property.[‡]

George's son and heir, Francis, 5th Earl of Shrewsbury, sold

Furnival's Inn to Lincoln's Inn in 1548.§

Now as to my suggestion with regard to the name of Lincoln's Inn, I start with these propositions, which I consider have been established:—

First, that the name of Lincoln's Inn was first applied to the Bishop of Chichester's house when the Society took possession of it, early in the fifteenth century.

Secondly, that the Society was not at that time a newly formed one; the arguments have already been given in this series, and there is no need to repeat them here.

Further, I assume that there was some sufficient reason for applying the name of Lincoln's Inn. The act was no doubt deliberate, and was not likely to have been done idly, or without due consideration.

The clue seems to be supplied by a statement of Dugdale's:—
"Of this Henry, Earl of Lincolne, is the tradition still current amongst the Antients here [i.e., at Lincoln's Inn], that he, about the beginning of King Edward the Second's time, being a person well affected to the knowledge of the Lawes, first brought in the professors of that honourable and necessary study, to settle in this place: but direct proof thereof from good authority, I have not as yet seen any."*

That the tradition was no new thing in Dugdale's time is shown by the fact that Lacy's arms were placed on the Gatehouse

in 1518, and on the louvre of the old Hall. †

Now it is clear, from what has already been said, that Lacy could not have "brought in the professors . . . to settle in this place" as Dugdale puts it, that is, in the present Lincoln's Inn, but that does not exclude the possibility of his having been the founder or patron, call it what you will, of the Society in another place. And this is what I suggest as the probable explanation.

I believe that the Society of Lincoln's Inn is identical with that company of apprentices who were living in the house of John Thavy in 1348, and were the persons "brought to settle" there by the Earl of Lincoln; that they moved subsequently to Lord Furnival's house, and thence finally to the Bishop of Chichester's house.

There is nothing in the language of Thavy's will to suggest that these apprentices were at that time recent tenants; on the contrary, the words habitare solebant give the distinct impression that they had been there some time. However this may be, this record of the apprentices at Thavy's house is, at the latest, within a generation of the Earl of Lincoln's death.[‡]

Thavy's Inn was situated in Holborn, immediately to the south-west of S. Andrew's Church. Its principal entrance, so far as one can judge from old maps, seems to have been from Holborn, on the west side of the church, but there was also an entrance from Shoe Lane, to the south of the church, and immediately opposite the Earl's house.

Here, if anywhere, it seems to me, must have been the legal society, of which the Earl was founder or patron.

The tradition probably truly reports that he encouraged the study of the common law, perhaps at first among his own clerks and servants, and afterwards as a separate society, living together at his own door.*

We have no clue to the name of the Society at this period, but I see no reason why it should not then have borne the name of Lincoln's Inn. Thavy describes his house by a circumlocution, and not by name; it is probable that the name did not attach until after his death, and it is not until long after that we find the place called in the vernacular, Thavy's Inn.

We know nothing of the internal progress of the company of apprentices in Thavy's house during the century following Thavy's death, but it is clear that the legal Societies during that period were in a flourishing condition. Fortescue, writing about 1465, mentions four Inns of Court and ten Inns of Chancery as existing in his day, and makes no reference to any of them as being then of recent establishment. This points to a steady increase in the number of lawyers for a considerable period.†

It must not be forgotten that during the fourteenth and fifteenth centuries none of the Inns of Court and Chancery were the owners of their hospitia; they were, without exception, tenants, apparently from year to year: there is no evidence of any lease. Even the influential Society of Lincoln's Inn does not appear to have had any fixity of tenure.‡

This fact is, I conceive, of the utmost importance when we consider what one of these early Societies, such as that at Thavy's house, would be forced to do when it began to outgrow the resources of its hospitium. Building must have been very difficult, if not impossible; there cannot have been any fund for such a purpose, and, as we have just seen, the property was not their own. Practically, there was a choice of two courses, and two only—they might divide and found elsewhere a colony, as it were, or the Society, as a whole, might remove to another building of greater capacity.

Dugdale records a tradition that the Society of Apprentices

† See note at the end of this article, showing the increase of legal business in the fourteenth century.

^{*} He was possessed of vast estates (a large portion of the Duchy of Lancaster property belonged to him); he was equally distinguished as a soldier and a statesman. An early chronicle, quoted by Weever (Funeral Monuments, p. 365), describes him as "Vir illustris in consilio, strenuus in omni guerra et prelio, princeps militie in Anglia, et in omni regno ornatissimus."

[‡] There is no trace of any lease of Lincoln's Inn until 1472, when one John Stanney undertook to procure a lease for 90 years. It does not appear that this was ever done. See Black Books, vol. 1, p. 53.

at the Temple came originally from Thavy's Inn,* thus affording an example of the first method. Mr. Inderwick, K.C., gives the date of the migration as about 1347.† I further suggest that the apprentices at Thavy's house, when again pressed by increase of numbers, adopted the other alternative, and moved to a larger house, that of Lord Furnival, further west in Holborn.

If such were the case, it would be natural enough that the landlord of the old Inn would wish to get a similar class of tenants; and that a younger society would take possession of the old quarters; that the larger body in the new Inn would keep up its associations with the younger and smaller body occupying the old Inn, and would send it Readers, and admit its members on more easy terms than were granted to outsiders. Some such hypothesis, it seems to me, is one of the most plausible ways of explaining the curious relationship between the various Inns of Court and their respective Inns of Chancery. Another explanation would be that the Inns of Chancery were deliberately founded by the Inns of Court as "feeders"; a third, that the smaller houses attached themselves to the larger by a process of "commendation." But the fact must not be overlooked, that most of the lesser Inns appear to be older than the greater. On the assumption of a migration caused by increase of numbers, there would be no difficulty in starting a new society in the house of the old one, and the former would be glad of the protection and assistance given by the superior antiquity, numbers, and influence of the latter.

Furnival's Inn was considerably larger than Thavy's Inn. We cannot, of course, even guess at the buildings comprising either of them in the fourteenth century, but a glance at any old map, such as Ogilby and Morgan's in 1677, will show that the area of Furnival's Inn is nearly twice as large as that of Thavy's Inn, and the buildings may well have been in proportion.

On the above theory, the Society on moving to its new premises would probably still retain its "usuall and antient name,"* and if the old house was to be occupied by a new society, a new name would have to be found for it. This, I suggest was

"Thavy's Inn," after the then or late proprietor.

We have seen that Dugdale records the existence of a Steward's account proving that a legal society was in occupation of Furnival's Inn in 9 Henry IV, 1407-8. This date is very suggestive when we remember that Thomas Neville, who died in 1407, held the property for his life, by the courtesy. There is no evidence that he lived there, however, and it is quite possible that its occupation by the lawyers dates back to the time of William de Furnival. Indeed an argument, of some weight, may be founded on the name and arms. There is no well authenticated case of the word "Inn" having ever been applied to a private house in private occupation,† and therefore we may argue that the name Furnival's Inn, and consequently the occupation by the Society, must date back to a time when the proprietor, to whom the legal society paid its rent, was named Furnival, that is, before 1383. If the Society had commenced its occupation after that date, we might reasonably expect to find the Inn called "Neville's Inn" or "Talbot's Inn." It is true that both Thomas Neville and John Talbot were summoned to Parliament as "Lord Furnival"; it may be pointed out, however, that neither of them is so called in the Inquisition of 1407.‡ Then as to the arms of Furnival's Inn, the Society appears to have used those of the Furnival family, with a "difference," namely, Argent, a bend between six martlets, gules, within a border azure. This, to my mind, strongly suggests that the Society came to Furnival's Inn at a time when the landlord was himself a Furnival, that is, before the death of William de Furnival in 1383.

The Society, if my theory be right, does not seem to have been long at Lord Furnival's house. An opportunity offering, under circumstances that we cannot now ascertain, I suggest that the same Society moved from Furnival's house into the still more roomy Palace of the Bishops of Chichester in Chancery Lane, again taking with it its old name. This would be between the death of Bishop Reade in 1415 and the commencement of the Black Books in 1422.

[§] Carter, Analysis of Honour and Armoury, 1673, p. 335; Edmondson's Heraldry; etc. The martlets are sometimes blazoned azure.

Here we have two items of confirmatory evidence as to the name:—

1. There is no evidence of the house of the Furnivals being called "Furnival's Inn" until after the Society of Lincoln's Inn had (on my theory) left it.

2. There is the very curious reduplication in the title to the first volume of the Black Books. This volume is headed Liber Hospicii de Lincolsin. Clearly both Hospitium and Inn are not wanted, and it is not unreasonable to assume that the writer was aware of the tautology. But if this was written on the removal of a Society, already known as "Lincolns Inn," to new premises which had, as yet, hardly acquired a new name, we see that the unknown writer, so far from being slipshod, was even something of a precisian. The Bishop of Chichester's house was not yet "Lincoln's Inn," but it was the "Hospitium of Lincoln's Inn," that is, of the Society of that name.* The expression does not occur again, the occasion for it must soon have passed away, and the new house was known by the name of its occupiers; thereafter it was "Lincoln's Inn" simply.

It is probable that the Bishop who admitted our Society to be tenants of his palace, left it with no intention of returning, and that the arrangement was thought advantageous by himself and his successors. Had any Bishop thought otherwise, he could, up to 1535 (the date of Suliard's lease), have resumed possession. It could be no object to him that the premises should continue to bear the name by which his palace had previously been known, whatever that was.† His hospitium was suum wherever he chose to live, and it would not be desirable that there should be two houses bearing the name of the See. When he left, the reason for any previous name probably went with him, and the Society on their entry called it with every right, "the Hospitium of

The theories here advanced are consistent with all the known facts, and they afford a plausible reason for the connection of Thavy's Inn and Furnival's Inn with Lincoln's Inn, and also for the fact of the name of "Lincoln's Inn" being given to a house which had no associations with the Earls of Lincoln.

On these grounds, therefore, I venture to put forward the propositions:-that the Society of Lincoln's Inn dates from some † Some writers state that it was called "Chichester Inn," but for this there is no contemporary authority.

^{*} I am indebted to Mr. W. C. Renshaw, K.C., for calling my attention to this interesting point.

unascertainable period before 1348; that it was then in occupation of John Thavy's house; that it is not unlikely, from the close proximity of Thavy's Inn to the Earl of Lincoln's house in Shoe Lane, that the old tradition is correct, and that the Earl was in some sense the eponymous founder or patron of the Society, and that it was probably already known as "the Society of Lincoln's Inn"; that about 1347, having outgrown its quarters, it sent out a swarm, which settled in the Temple; that later on in the 14th century, and probably before 1383, owing to the same cause, it migrated to a larger house, the property of Lord Furnival, still retaining its old name; that shortly before 1422, having an opportunity of moving into still larger premises, it became tenant of the Bishop of Chichester's Palace in Chancery Lane, which thus became the Hospitium of Lincoln's Inn.

Floreat!

Note.—In order to prove my statement as to the increase of legal business during the fourteenth century, I have prepared the following table, which gives a rough estimate of the number of cases dealt with by the Court of Common Pleas. To ascertain this, I have given the actual number of membranes in the De Banco Rolls for the years 1300, 1320, 1340, 1360, 1380, 1400, and 1420. Each membrane is from two feet to two feet six inches long, and about eight to ten inches wide, and most of them are closely written on both sides. Naturally the length of cases as recorded varies very much, and consequently the number on each membrane.

In order to estimate the number of cases I have taken the average of the first hundred membranes of the roll for Hilary Term, 1340, one of medium size. This works out as follows:—

Average for the first 50 - - 17.1 Average for the second 50 - - 16.0 Average for the first 100 - - 16.6

To be on the safe side I have multiplied the number of membranes by 15, and the result gives a fair estimate of cases for each year.

The figures are perhaps a little startling, but it must be remembered that each action may have come before the Court many times before the stage of final hearing; the Rolls contain all the business of the Court,* much of which, under the modern practice, would be heard in chambers.

	1300.	1320.	1340.	1360.	1380.	1400.	1420.
Hilary	213	146	397	290	534	360	503
Easter	189	109	353	254	497	441	436
Trinity	200	218	308	294	561	434	440
Michaelmas-	381	366	610	446	637	608	556
	983	839	1,668	1,284	2,229	1,843	1,935
	15	15	15	15	15	15	15
Cases	14,745	12,585	25,020	19,260	33,435	27,645	29,025

It will be seen that in 1340 the cases before the Court are very nearly twice as many as they were in 1300 or 1320. The falling off in 1360 was no doubt due to the devastation caused by the Black Death eleven years before. By 1380 the country appears to have entirely recovered, and there is again a substantial increase in the number of cases. The decrease in 1400 may be due to the unsettled state of the country; 1420 shows an increase over 1400, but does not touch the high-water mark of 1380.

It may be merely an accident, but it is worthy of note that the substantial increases shown in 1340 and 1380 coincide in a remarkable way with the date of 1347 given by Mr. Inderwick for the colonization of the Temple from Thavy's Inn, and with the date suggested by me for the removal to Furnival's Inn.

Maps and Plans.

The early maps of London are too vague to be of any value so far as the ground plan of Lincoln's Inn is concerned. The earliest of any practical utility is a very scarce print by Hollar, circa 1650, a portion of which is here reproduced. The buildings of the Inn are shown with much fidelity, but the Chapel is placed too far north, and the Gate House is not quite in its right place. This view should be studied in connection with the annexed plan from Ogilby and Morgan's Map of 1677. The most marked difference is seen in the garden, which appears to have been altered in 1662. An order for "the modellinge of the Garden and Walkes, and the fellinge and loppinge of trees therein," was made on November 27th of that year.* Hollar's view brings out very clearly the distinction between the Garden and the Walks.

The coloured plan facing page 302 is, in outline a reproduction from the Ordnance Survey, and includes all existing buildings in the Inn. It has been coloured chronologically in centuries, and

Proved August 18, 1707, by Dame Dorothy Francklin, the relict

2 and 3. Azure, a pile ermine.

Crest: Two greyhounds' heads endorsed (argent and sable), collared and ringed (counterchanged).

Not mentioned in the Black Books.

Note.—The arms and crest are those of Atkyns, and the impalement the arms of Marshe. It is noteworthy that in 1656, Sir Edward Atkyns, then a Judge of the Court of Common Pleas, presented to the Society "a very fayre standinge silver bowle and cover, frosted." (Black Books, ii, 413.) Nothing more is known about this bowl. It is not mentioned in the inventories of 1727 and 1742, (Black Books, iii, 284, 326), and it is not now in the possession of the Society. The arms on the patens are those of Sir Edward's father and mother, Richard Atkyns and Elizabeth daughter of Thomas Marshe of Waresley, co. Huntingdon. Richard died in 1610 and his wife in 1594; they are buried at Hempsted, co. Gloucester, (Bigland's Gloucester, p. 67). It seems not unlikely that these patens in some way represent Sir Edward Atkyns' gift, and that the arms on them were copied from those on the bowl.

GREAT STORM, 1779.

Gentleman's Magazine, vol. 49, p. 215.

Friday, April 23rd.

By the violence of the wind at noon this day, the copper p. 16. covering of the roof of the new buildings at Lincoln's Inn was blown off in one sheet, and hung over the front like a large carpet or mainsail; the noise occasioned by this accident made the neighbourhood conclude the building was falling down. Several of the plates which composed this covering were carried into a yard in Holborn.

THE GORDON RIOTS, 1780.

of the Riots, see Gentleman's Magazine, vol. 50, p. 265, et seq.

Two members of the Inn were personally assaulted. "They stopt the venerable old Lord President Bathurst in his carriage, pulled him a hundred different ways in getting out, kicked his legs, and it was with difficulty he got in to the House. Lord Mansfield was daringly abused, and had mud thrown in his face."

[p. 267.]

The Sardinian Ambassador's Chapel, in Duke Street, Lincoln's Inn Fields was broken into, and the altars, ornaments and furniture were burnt, including the altar-piece by the Chevalier Casali, said to have cost £,2,500.

The Templars, and Students, and Practitioners of the several Inns of Court, had already provided for their own security by taking up arms on the first serious alarm. [p. 316.]

We, taking into our most serious consideration the just and necessary hostilities in which we are engaged, and the unnatural rebellion carrying on in some of our provinces and colonies in North America, and putting our trust in Almighty God, that he will vouchsafe a special blessing on our arms both by sea and land, have resolved, and do, by and with the advice of our Privy Council, hereby command, that a public Fast and Humiliation be observed throughout that part of our Kingdom of Great Britain called England, our Dominion of Wales, and Town of Berwick upon Tweed, upon Friday, the 8th day of February next; etc.

APPENDIX IV.

Great Storm, December 23rd, 1790. Gentleman's Magazine, vol. 60, p. 1143.

Thursday, December 23rd.

p. 48. Between four and five o'clock in the morning, a second but more violent storm blew from the south-west, attended with successive flashes of lightning, and continued rolls of loud thunder, succeeded by heavy showers of hail and rain. Part of the copper roofing of the new stone buildings in Lincoln's Inn was blown over the Six Clerks' Office into Chancery-lane, and some part of it over the roofs of the opposite houses in the lane into a yard, and part passed through a garret window of one of those houses, inhabited by Mr. White; so that it must have been raised near a hundred feet into the air. Thirteen trees were blown down in Lincoln's Inn Gardens. A maid-servant of Counsellor Graham's was killed in her bed, by the falling of a stack of chimnies, at his chambers on the south side of Lincoln's Inn New Square: his man-servant fortunately escaped, by quitting his bed on the first alarm.
